

SRI RAMANUJACHARYA

A SKETCH OF

HIS LIFE AND TIMES

BY

S KRISHNASWAMI AYYANGAR, M.A.

HIS PHILOSOPHICAL SYSTEM

BY

T RAJAGOPALA CHARIAR, M.A., B.L.

WITH AN ACCOUNT OF

RAMANUJA AND VAISHNAVISM

BY

RAO BAHADUR PROF. M RANGACHARYA, M.A.

Second Edition,

PRICE AS. 12

NATESAN & CO, PUBLISHERS, Madras

PUBLISHERS' NOTE

THIS is a companion volume to the sketches of Sri-Sankaracharya and Sri-Madhwacharya which we have already issued. The book consists of three parts; in the first, Mr. S. Krishnaswami Aiyangar, M.A., M.R.A.S., gives an account of Sri-Ramanuja's "Life and Times," while in the second, Mr. T. Rajagopalachariar, M.A., B.L., gives a succinct exposition of Sri-Ramanuja's Visishtadvaita Philosophy. In the third, Professor M. Rangachariar, M.A., describes the position occupied by Ramanuja in relation to the progress and development of Vaishnavism.

CONTENTS.

Sri Ramanujacharya . His Life and Times	...	1
Sri Ramanujacharya : His Philosophy	..	39
Ramanuja and Vaishnavism	...	54
Appendix	1

UNIFORM WITH THIS VOLUME

SRI SANKARACHARYA.

I HIS LIFE AND TIMES

BY C N KRISHNASAMI AIYAR, M.A., L.T.,

II. HIS PHILOSOPHY,

BY PANDIT SITANATH TATTVADHUSHAN

EXTRACTS FROM THE PREFACE.

In the religious history of India, perhaps no one has, at any rate during the last one thousand years, played a more prominent part than Sankara. A connected account of whose life and teachings is presented briefly in English in this volume. It is hoped that the readers of this volume will find therein such materials of thought and history as will enable them to know accurately the position of Sankara in the evolution of the national religious life of the Hindu people and enable them also at the same time to estimate correctly the great value of his work in life as viewed from the stand point of history. How he was the product of the age in which he was born, how he in his turn impressed his personality on the unity of Hindu life and civilisation, how his work as a scholar and reformer has been in harmony with the historic genius of the Hindu nation, and how lastly this work of his has, owing to this very harmony, become fully assimilated into the life of the living India of to-day, are all things which are sure to strike the observant reader of Sankara's Life and Times.

Price Annas 12

To Subscribers of the "Indian Review" As 8

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankaranga Chetty Street, Madras

UNIFORM WITH THIS VOLUME

SRI MADHWACHARYA

A sketch of his Life and Times.

BY C. N. KRISHNASWAMI AIYAR, M.A.

Contents —Introductory —The Land of the Guru's Birth. The State of Sankara's System. Birth and early years of the Guru. The Great Renunciation.—The Guru's Southern Tour —The Guru's Northern Tour.— Beginnings of Persecution. The Appropriation of the Library. Last years of the Guru.—Outlook of the Guru's Faith.

The Philosophy of Madhwacharya.

A clear and concise exposition.

BY MR. S SUBBA RAU, M.A.

In this part Mr S. Subba Row, the renowned translator of the "Purna-Pragna Darshana" and also of "Sri Madhwacharya's Commentaries on the Bhagavad-Gita," gives a very readable account of the general view of the cardinal principles and of the general course of reasoning employed to maintain the Dvaita or Dualistic system of thought founded by the great Acharya. In attempting this the author has instituted a fairly searching contrast between the Dvaita philosophy and all the other schools of thought both ancient and modern and he has tried to make the distinctive character of Sri Madhwacharya's philosophic system as clear as possible.

Price As 12.

To Subscribers of the Indian Review As. 8.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Runkurama Chattri Street Madras.

Sri Ramanujacharya

HIS LIFE AND TIMES

BY

MR S KRISHNASWAMI AYYANGAR, M A, M R A S

GENERAL CHARACTER OF SOUTH INDIAN HISTORY

Upon the religious history of India, the contributions that the Southern half has had to make have been many. The South generally enjoyed more peaceful development and was long out of the convulsions that threw the North into confusion, and all the internal revolutions and external attacks sent out the pulse of the impact almost spent out to the South. This has been of great advantage and it is precisely in the dark ages of the North, that often intervened brighter epochs, that the South sent out its light to redeem the darkness.

SOUTH INDIAN CONTRIBUTION TO RELIGIONS IN INDIA

This general character of the history of the North of India from the first centuries of the Christian era onwards makes a continuous history impossible on certain lines; while in the South during this period, there has been a continuity of development amidst all the din and clang of war and dynastic revolutions. Our concern here is about the Vaishnava movement and this has had a continuous history almost from the beginning of the Christian era

MIS IMPRESSIONS REGARDING RAMANUJA

There has been considerable mis impression that the Vaishnava movement originated in Ramanuja and all those that claim to be Vaishnavas (not including the disciples of Madhva who are Vaishnava in a narrower sense) both in the North and the South can trace their particular form of Vedanta no earlier than Ramanuja. On the basis of this mis-impression, theories have been built up time and again that the characteristic features of the special teachings of Ramanuja have been borrowed from Christianity. The latest exponent of this theory is Dr Gieson, though he would make a considerable distinction between the Vaishnavas of modern times and those of the older, and perhaps, set those of the North against the South. This no doubt is an error which arises from not giving due weight to the indebtedness of Ramanuja to those Tamil saints that had gone before him long ere he came into the world. The hypothesis would be untenable unless it could be proved that all these Tamil saints could be shown also to have visited the Christian shrine at Mylapore or elsewhere. Besides, even from the point of view of Sanskrit Vaishnavism, it cannot be said to have been proven that the peculiar features of Ramanuja-Vaishnavism is not traceable to earlier works and teachers. Hence a life of Ramanuja based on historical material alone and free from the legends that have gathered round it, as time wore off, would be of great advantage to clear away the wrong impressions that prevail regarding his life and teaching

THE SPECIAL PERIOD OF RAMANUJA'S ADVENT

That Ramanuja should have appeared in the eleventh century is quite as much of the mission getting the man as the advent of the Buddha in the sixth century before Christ. This century in the south of India was characterised by considerable religious ferment. It was then that each religious sect among the people felt the need for formulating a creed of its own and placing itself in a regularly organised religious body so as to be able to hold its own in the midst of the disintegrating influences that gained dominance in society. That Ramanuja appeared and did what is ascribed to him is just in the fitness of things, having regard to the circumstances of the times.

PREDECESSORS OF RAMANUJA

(a) THE ALVARS

There have been a succession of devotees called in Vaishnava parlance Alvars in contradistinction to a similar Saiva group called Adiyars. These two classes had considerable similarity with characteristic distinctions. They both laid stress on the doctrine of Bhakti as a means to the attainment of salvation, the one through Vishnu and the other through Siva. The Vaishnava tradition names twelve of the Alvars while the Saiva saints number sixty-three. The Tamil works of the former including a centum upon Ramanuja himself, constitute the Prabbandum 4,000, while those of the Saivas constitute a vaster collection of Tevarams, &c

The twelve Alvars are in the traditional order :

- | | | |
|-----|---|---------------------------|
| I | { | 1. Poygai Alvar. |
| | | 2. Bhutabhu Alvar. |
| | | 3. Pey Alvar. |
| II | | 4. Tirumalisesa Alvar. |
| III | { | 5. Nammalvar. |
| | | 6. Madhurasai Alvar. |
| IV | | 7. Kulasekharalvar. |
| V | { | 8. Periyalvar. |
| | | 9. Andal |
| VI | { | 10. Tindaradippodi Alvar. |
| | | 11. Tiruppanalvar. |
| | | 12. Tirumangai Alvar. |

The actual dates ascribed by the hagiologists to these Alvars would not bear scrutiny, but the order in which they are mentioned is substantially correct. In order of importance, Nammalvar stands first, and it is his work that has the distinctive appellation Tiruvoyomoli — "the word of the mouth" They were all regarded by the generations that succeeded them, as manifestations of divine wisdom to redeem the world from the perilous plights to which it had brought itself

(b) THE ACHARYAS

The next group that followed, as the hagiologists would have us believe, in unbroken succession, is known as Acharyas (or preceptors) not so near to the divine, but still raised above the ordinary man of the world by much. This orthodox successions of Apostles include six names before Ramanuja, of which the two most important are Natham and his grand-son.

Alavandar The great grand son of this latter through one of his grand daughters was Ramanuja

PARENTAGE AND BIRTH OF RAMANUJA

While Alavandar was still in occupation of the apostolic seat of the Vaishnavas at Srirangam, one of his grandsons requested permission of him to go and devote himself to the service of God on the Tirupathi Hill The permission was graciously accorded and the young man went and settled there with his venerable father and two younger sisters While there, two young men wishing to enter life as house-holders happened to go to the holy place and sought each the hand of one of the sisters Of these two Asuri Kesava Bhattar of Sri Perumbathur wedded the elder, while Kalmayanna Bhattar of Malalaimangalam accepted the younger of the girls Of the first pair in course of time was born a boy (in 1017 A D) whom the maternal uncle named Lakshmana (otherwise Ramanuja or in Tamil Ilaya Perumal)

EARLY LIFE OF RAMANUJA

Of the childhood of Ramanuja, as of others in similar positions of life, very little is known There appears to have been nothing extraordinary in his career except that he appears to have lost his father while young He received the kind of education ordinarily given to boys of his class and age along with his cousin, (mother's sister's son) Govinda Bhattar, as he was called The two young men had advanced sufficiently to seek a teacher in the Vedanta to instruct them They went to a teacher of reputation holding his classes in Conjeevaram and this change marks the turning point in the career of the young men

RAMANUJA AND YADAVAPRAKASA

Under Yadavaprakasa then the two cousins Ramanuja and Govina Bhattar were both studying the Vedanta assiduously. The former made such progress and his great grandfather at Srirangam had heard such good reports of his remarkable advance, that he travelled all the way incognito to see the young man. This he did in the Deva Raja Shrine at Conjeevaram. Gratified with the look of the young man, he went back hoping that he might soon transfer the mantle of office to the youth of great promise that he just saw. He did not wish to speak to Ramanuja lest it should attract attention and disturb Ramanuja's studies in any way. Ramanuja went on with his studies yet a while, when he began to feel that at times Yadavaprakasa's interpretations of Vedic passages were not quite up to his satisfaction. On one occasion, he even went the length of offering an explanation of his own which struck those about, as more satisfactory than that of his master. This led to grave differences between master and disciple. Matters advanced a step further when at the invitation of the ruler of the place, Yadavaprakasa failed in an attempt at exorcising. The princess was possessed and the spirit declined to move at Yadava's bidding. It would, however, go away if it were Ramanuja's pleasure that it should. Ramanuja was pleased to give the order and the ghost was raised. This made Yadava more jealous of his pupil and the crisis was reached when interpreting another Upanishad, Yadava again rendered the passage in a somewhat absurdly disrespectful manner. Ramanuja showed positive disapproval of what he considered a purposeful distortion of the texts. Yadavaprakasa asked Ramanuja to leave his academy, but was advised to get rid of Ramanuja altogether.

ATTEMPT AT ASSASSINATION OF RAMANUJA

At the instigation of some of his disciples Yadava organised a pilgrimage to Benares, and Ramanuja and his cousin were among the party. The latter having been more docile stood in high favour with the master and was in the secrets of the plot to assassinate Ramanuja. It was arranged to kill him in the depths of the forests, perhaps not very far from Kanchi. Information of this was given to Ramanuja in time and he escaped at dead of night, and journeyed back to Kanchi under the guidance of a kind hunter and huntress. At daybreak the latter asked for a little water and when Ramanuja got down a well to fetch her some, the pair disappeared. Ramanuja had not to travel much farther before he came in sight of the spires of the great temple at Kanchi.

RAMANUJA'S RETURN AFTER ESCAPE

Having reached Kanchi and intimated to his mother of what had happened and how he escaped death by divine intervention, he settled down as a householder at the instance of his mother, and devoted himself to the service of God. Devaraja at Kanchi Alavandar was drawing near his end in the meanwhile, and those about him despatched the eldest among his disciples to go and bring Ramannja to Srirangam. Periyannambi, as this emissary was called, arrived at Kanchi and stood reciting one of the beautiful verses in praise of God (the Stotraratna) composed by his master Alavandar. Ramannja's attention was drawn to the slokas (verses) in spite of his single-minded devotion to his preparation for the morning service. Turning round he asked the stranger who the composer of the piece was. Periyannambi answered it was his great master Alavandar. The next question was necessarily, whether he could see him. "If you would go with me now," said Periyannambi, "I will take you to him." Ramannja hurried through his morning service and started with Periyannambi, having obtained permission of Devaraja for the journey.

RAMANUJA'S FIRST JOURNEY TO SRIRANGAM TO VISIT ALAVANDAR.

They journeyed along till they reached the northern side of Srirangam when at a distance Ramanuja descried a group of men on the south bank of the Koleroon River. Approaching closer Periyannambi and his younger companion discovered that Alavandar was no more and the group consisted of his disciples, came there with the remains of the departed great one for its final disposal. Ramanuja was taken close to the body to take a first and final look at the great master, when lo! he saw three out of the five fingers of the right hand folded. Struck with this, he enquired whether the effect was noticed in life and the answer came that the defect was not physical and was not noticed in life. On further enquiry Ramanuja was told that the master had three of his cherished objects unfulfilled, namely, an easily-read and understood commentary upon the Brahmasutra; the giving of the names of Parasara and Shadagopa to suitable persons that would make these names live among the people. Ramanuja promised to see these fulfilled and the fingers straightened. Ramanuja waited for the funeral ceremonies to be completed and returned to Kanchi to resume his duties of devotion to God.

RETURN OF RAMANUJA TO KANCHI AND THE MISSION OF HIS FUTURE

Days having passed, in his usual round of service Ramanuja felt that time was passing without any attempt on his part to perform what he had promised to do. Not knowing what exactly to do, he appealed to the elderly priest of God Devanaya and wished that he might ascertain the divine will regarding his own future. Tirukkachchinambi as the priest was called, gave out the will of God, in the matter, in the following sloka

“Sreman param tatvam aham, matam me bhedaha,
prapattirnirapaya hetuhu,

Navasyakicha smriti, hiantyakale mokshaha,
mahapurnaha iha aryavarya ”

“I am the supreme, my conviction is distinction, devotion is the unfailing cause of salvation, conscious volition not essential, release in the end, at present Periyannambi is the highest preceptor.”

and those about him despatched the eldest among his disciples to go and bring Ramannuja to Srirangam. Periyannambi, as this emissary was called, arrived at Kunchi and stood reciting one of the beautiful verses in praise of God (the Stotratna) composed by his master Alavandar. Ramannuja's attention was drawn to the slohas (verses) in spite of his single minded devotion to his preparation for the morning service. Turning round he asked the stranger who the composer of the piece was. Periyannambi answered it was his great master Alavandar. The next question was necessarily, whether he could see him. "If you would go with me now," said Periyannambi, "I will take you to him." Ramannuja hurried through his morning service and started with Periyannambi, having obtained permission of Devaraja for the journey.

RAMANUJA'S FIRST JOURNEY TO SRIRANGAM TO VISIT ALAVANDAR

They journeyed along till they reached the northern side of Srirangam when at a distance Ramannuja descried a group of men on the south bank of the Koleroon River. Approaching closer Periyannambi and his younger companion discovered that Alavandar was no more and the group consisted of his disciples, came there with the remains of the departed great one for its final disposal. Ramannuja was taken close to the body to take a first and final look at the great master, when lo! he saw three out of the five fingers of the right hand folded. Struck with this, he enquired whether the effect was noticed in life and the answer came that the defect was not physical and was not noticed in life. On further enquiry Ramanuja was told that the master had three of his cherished objects unfulfilled, namely, an easily read and understood commentary upon the Brahmasutra, the giving of the names of Parasara and Shadagopa to suitable persons that would make these names live among the people. Ramanuja promised to see these fulfilled and the fingers straightened. Ramanuja waited for the funeral ceremonies to be completed and returned to Kanchi to resume his duties of devotion to God.

RETURN OF RAMANUJA TO KANCHI AND THE MISSION OF HIS FUTURE

Days having passed, in his usual round of service Ramanuja felt that time was passing without any attempt on his part to perform what he had promised to do. Not knowing what exactly to do, he appealed to the elderly priest of God Devanaja and wished that he might ascertain the divine will regarding his own future. Tirukkachchinambi as the priest was called, gave out the will of God, in the matter, in the following sloka

“Sreman param tatvam aham, matam me bhedaḥ,
prapattirnirōpaya hetuḥ,

Navasyakīcha smṛti, hiantyakale mokṣaḥ,
mahapurnāha iha aryaṭvayāha.”

“I am the supreme, my conviction is distinction, devotion is the unfailing cause of salvation, conscious
volition not essential, release in the end, at present
Periyannambi is the highest preceptor.”

CIRCUMSTANCES LEADING TO RAMANUJA'S RENUNCIATION.

*.Nambi and Ramanuja took up lodgings together and the two families were living amicably together for some time. Ramanuja, however, does not appear to have been very happy in the choice of his wife. He did not find in her that ready sympathy and compliance to his own wishes he expected of her. On one occasion he had invited Tirukachchinambi to his house and the two were seated and conversed together for a while. When the former went away Ramanuja's wife quickly washed the seat occupied by him, the temple-priest having been of a slightly inferior status in point of caste. Ramanuja felt aggrieved and overlooked this offence with an admonition. Again one morning while he was still by the accustomed well preparing for the morning service at the temple, a poor man asked him for food. He directed him home with instructions to demand food of Ramanuja's wife with the husband's permission. She said there was none available. The man returned intimating Ramanuja of how he fared. Ramanuja's enquiry on returning home proved that there was some food which might have been given to the person. Again he excused her. But the third offence proved the last straw, and was the most serious of all in Ramanuja's estimation. Ramanuja's wife and Periyanambar both of them went to the same well to fetch water. It would appear that through the latter's carelessness some water from her vessel dropped into that of the other. This naturally led to some alterca-of their late master which had remained unoccupied for lack of a suitable successor. This time they sent another of Alavandar's immediate disciples, his own son, by name Tiruvaraigapperumal Ariyar. Ramanuja followed the Ariyar and settled down at Srirangam. It was now that he set about seriously to acquire the qualifications which alone would justify his accession to the high position to which he was looked upon by the public as the most worthy candidate. He had, therefore, to get himself initiated in every department of learning and philosophy which then constituted the Vaishnava lore. Periyanaambi having become his guru (preceptor) in one part, he had to seek initiation of Tirukottiyurnambi for another (manthartham). He went six times in succession and on all these occasions the master was not satisfied with the earnestness of the disciple and declined to open his mind. Ramanuja in despondency thought of giving up the business when he was asked to try another time. He succeeded in inducing the great one to unlock his secrets, after the customary promise not to publish except to a worthy disciple previously tried. Ramanuja agreed and found the secrets of such efficacy for salvation that he taught all about him what he learnt. The guru summoned the disciple to his presence and asked him how it was that he so flagrantly transgressed the injunctions of his master. Ramanuja begged to be prescribed the punishment and the guru replied that the punishment would be 'eternal-hell' hereafter, but nothing here, Ramanuja replied further discussions were found to have been in full agreement with the views of Alavandar. This new acquisition completed his round of qualifications and he had become in fact a successor of Alavandar in every sense of the term.

• A SECOND ATTEMPT ON RAMANUJA'S LIFE

Ramanuja's fame had spread so wide and he came to be known so well that his little cousin at Tirupathi (son of his maternal uncle) evinced a precocious desire to attach himself to Ramanuja. The father sent the boy in charge of a nephew of his own and the two arrived at Srirangam when Ramanuja's life had been saved by the unlooked for intervention of a good woman. Ramanuja, as a sannyasi had to go round at mid-day from house to house for food. One of the householders had instructed his wife to poison the food and serve it to him. The woman felt compelled to obey the husband, but on giving the handful to Ramanuja, could not bear the feeling that the good man would die of the food. She, therefore, prostrated before him while getting back into the house. It is recognised as a rule of practice that when a sannyasi goes out for alms (biksha), no one should make the usual salutation. This strange conduct on the part of the lady struck Ramanuja and he suspected foul play. On examination the poisoning was discovered and ever after it was arranged that the elder of the two new arrivals should under take the food-supply of Ramanuja. In spite of this attempt at assassination, all had so far gone smoothly, and the life of Ramanuja becomes stormy hereafter His fame had spread far and the few prominent conversions attracted attention Whether he wished it or no, he had to make his position good against all comers and had to assume the role of a controversialist

CONTROVERSY WITH LEGNAMURTI

At this time there arrived at Srirangam an advaitic sannyasi by name Legnamurti, in the course of a controversial tour through India There began between the two a great disputation regarding the relative superiority of their respective creeds For sixteen days they went on with no decisive result either way and Ramanuja was somewhat anxious about his own position, when it struck him that he might derive some help from Alavandar's works He referred to the latter's Mayavadakandanam (a refutation of the idealistic theory) Thus armed he overcame his adversary on the seventeenth day and as a result, enlisted his rival among his followers under the Vaishnava designation of Arulalapperumal Emburumanar

RAMANUJA'S FULFILMENT OF HIS FIRST PROMISE

Sometime after Ramanuja felt that he might conveniently pay the long wished-for visit to his uncle, who sent word through his nephew that he very much wished to see him Ramanuja then set forward to Tuupathi, one of the three 'holy of holies' of the Sri Vaishnavas He stayed there a year receiving instruction in the Ramayana from his maternal uncle there, who at the end of the period made over to him his two sons His preparations were now complete and as he was growing old, he set about fulfilling his undertaking to Alavandar. The first of his three promises was the writing out of such a commentary for the Brahmasutra as would embody the views of the qualified monistic school of thought. It was absolutely essential for a due performance of this work that he should acquaint himself with the previous commentators, particularly of the Bodhayana-vritti. This naturally was not easy of acquisition for one of his intentions explicit and implied. He had to go about much before he found access to a library in the North, containing the work, where he was allowed just to read it through. He felt that it was not enough when a quick disciple among his followers came to his rescue by saying that he had completely mastered the work and could give references whenever wanted. This was one among his first disciples, who lived to render yet greater services to his master. With the help of Kurathalvar—for such was the name of this stout-hearted and quick minded disciple Ramanuja wrote out the three works, the essence of the Vedanta (Vedantasaram), a resume of the Vedanta (Vedanta Sangraham), the light of the Vedanta (Vedantadipam). He also wrote, or rather gave out, the commentaries on the Brahmasutra and Bhagavatgita. This list of works redeemed Ramanuja from his first promise.

RAMANUJA SECURES THE APPROVAL OF THE

• LEARNED FOR HIS BHASHYA

But these must be accepted before Ramanuja could feel he had done his duty to his master. He had, therefore, to start on a tour to different places to secure the approval of the learned. This tour naturally took him to the great seat of learning, Kashmīr. There at Sarasvatīpita (the seat of learning) he read through the work in an assembly of philosophers and obtained from them the approval of no less an authority than "Sarasvatī" herself. As a token of her approval she presented Ramanuja with the image of Hayagrīva (horse-necked, an aspect of Viṣṇu) and said that his commentary might thereafter be known Sri Bhashya (the commentary). It is because of this distinction that among his disciples Ramanuja is known Bhashyakarar (maker of the Bhashya). The image of Hayagrīva has come down to the present generation and is believed to be that which is the object of worship at the Parakalamutt at Mysore.

RAMANUJA SETTLES SAIVA-VAISHNAVA DISPUTE AT TIRUPATHI.

Returning from the North he had to pass by way of Tirupathi where matters had assumed a serious aspect on a dispute as to the nature of the deity there. The Saivas claimed the shrine to be that of God Subrahmanya while the Vaishnavas claimed it as that of Viṣṇu. The matter had, therefore, to be settled one way or the other and they agreed to leave the decision to the God himself. It was arranged that one evening both parties should assemble and lock up the sanctum sanctorum having placed the weapons peculiar to each deity. The shrine was to be that of Viṣṇu or Śiva according as the one set or the other was assumed by God. It was found the next morning that the image had assumed the disc and conch characteristic of Vishnu, and ever after the shrine appears to have been taken to be that of Vishnu. Having settled this dispute Ramanuja returned to Srirangam and set about arranging matters for getting through the remaining items of work he had undertaken.

RAMANUJA FULFILLS THE SECOND DESIDERATUM

SAHASRANAMA BHASUYA

Ramanuja's foremost disciple Kumthalvar was for long childless. One night it would appear he had to go to bed without food having had to fast the whole day for lack of provisions. The bell in the great temple pealed indicating that the night worship was going on. The devoted wife thought to herself that it was hardly fair that God Ranganatha should accept regular worship when the stannobest of his devotees lay starving. Soon after the temple priests brought a supply of food from the temple and knocked at the door of Kurathalvar. The wife opened the door and delighted with the arrival of food, woke up the restless husband and fed him. As the direct outcome of this divine favour, she soon became mother of two sons to one of whom at the instance of Ramanuja, the name Parasara was given. This boy had grown up to man's state when Ramanuja was looking out for some one through whom he might fulfil the second object. This young man Parasara Bhatta was commissioned to write a commentary on the Sahasranama (the thousand had, therefore, to start on a tour to different places to secure the approval of the learned. This tour naturally took him to the great seat of learning, Kashmir. There at Sarasvatipita (the seat of learning) he read through the work in an assembly of philosophers and obtained from them the approval of no less an authority than "Sarasvati" herself. As a token of her approval she presented Ramanuja with the image of Hayagriva (horse-necked, an aspect of Vishnu) and said that his commentary might thereafter be known Sri Bhashya (the commentary). It is because of this distinction that among his disciples Ramanuja is known Bhashyakara (master of the Bhashya). The image of Hayagriva has come down to the present generation and is believed to be that which is the object of worship at the Parakalamutt at Mysore.

RAMANUJA SETTLES SAIVA VAISHNAVA DISPUTE AT TIRUPATHI

Returning from the North he had to pass by way of Tirupathi where matters had assumed a serious aspect as to the nature of the deity there. The Saivas claimed the shrine to be that of God Subrahmanya while the Vaishnavas claimed it as that of Vishnu. The matter had, therefore, to be settled one way or the other and they agreed to leave the decision to the God himself. It was arranged that one evening both parties should assemble and lock up the sanctum sanctorum having placed the weapons peculiar to each deity. The shrine was to be that of Vishnu or Siva according as the one set or the other was as-names of Vishnu) This work of Parasara Bhatta fulfilled the second of the desiderata of Alavandar

PILLAN'S 6000 COMMENTARY ON THE TIRUVOYMOLI.

FULFILMENT OF THE THIRD DESIDERATUM

There then remained the means of perpetuating the name of Nammalvar, the author of the Tiruvoymoli. Ramanuja was perhaps thinking of a commentary himself. It would appear he was contemplating within a closed room a particular verse of the work attempting to realize its full significance when his cousin looked through a chink in the door. The young man, Pillan by name, forthwith put the question whether the master was pondering the verse referring to the God at Tirumalirunjola. Ramanuja was struck with the acuteness of the young man, and commissioned him to write out the 6000 commentary on the Tiruvoymoli, giving him the name Tirukkurnasippiran Pillan, the first part of which being one of the many surnames of Nammalvar. This brought the third of Alavandar's desiderata to fulfilment. Ramanuja could now feel his mission at an end and settle down to a life of quiet teaching. This way perhaps years rolled by.

THE CHOLA PERSECUTION AND ESCAPE OF RAMANUJA

He was not, however, altogether unmolested. Perhaps a change of ruler or a change in his surroundings brought about a change in the spirit of complete tolerance that as a rule characterised the administration. Be the cause what it may, the Chola ruler for the time being, often given the name Kulothunga, took it into his head to demand assent to the doctrine,

"Sivat parataram nasti." "There is no being (God) superior to Siva." This seems to have been aimed particularly against the Ramannja propagandists, perhaps because of a few prominent conversions. This challenge was openly thrown out, and naturally enough everybody pointed to Ramanuja as the person whose assent ought to be obtained. Ramannja was summoned to appear in the royal presence.

Ramanuja's friends feared danger, and to avoid it Kurathalvar undertook to personate Ramannja. Assuming the robes of the sannyasi, Kurathalvar went along with the venerable Periyannambi to the Chola Court, while Ramannja assuming the dress of a house-holder and at the head of a small body of adherents betook himself to the kingdom of the Hoysala Bitti Deva. Travelling along the banks of the Kaveri Ramannja settled down at Saligram where he lived for a period of 12 years. While here Bitti Deva was just carving out for himself a kingdom along the southern marches of the Chalukya kingdom of Vikramaditya and the Chola frontier in the north-west.

CONVERSION OF BITTI DEVA.

A daughter of the king was possessed and after failing in all other attempts at exorcism Ramanuja's aid was called in. Sure enough the ghost was raised and Bitti Deva agreed to become the disciple of Ramanuja. This could not, however, be without overcoming the Jains in controversy, as the king is reputed to have been a Jain. Ramanuja had the best of it in the disputation and the bulk of the Jains either embraced the Ramanuja daisana or were ordered to be ground down in oil mill. This latter threat, however, was not carried into effect through the intervention of Ramanuja. Ramanuja returned to Saligram.

DISCOVERY AND CONSECRATION OF THE MELLAKOTE TEMPLE

It was while here that Ramanuja's stock of namam (the white earth which serves for the Vaishnava caste mark on the forehead) ran out of stock and Ramanuja was much concerned. He dreamt overnight that there was a hill of that material, not far from Tondanur, where he made the acquaintance with Bitti Deva. Following the clue he obtained in his dream, and through the good offices of Vitala Deva (Bitti Deva) Ramanuja got the spot marked out in his dream dug up, when lo! there appeared beneath a small shrine. He then got it consecrated as Tirunaranapuram (Mellakote of the maps). Thinking of a suitable image for this shrine, he dreamt of the image of Ramaprya which was at Delhi in possession of the daughter of the ruler of the time. He had to undertake a journey to Northern India again. Having got possession of the image somewhat miraculously, he returned with it. As the princess proved inconsolable without her pet image, the (king whoever he was) sent a party of men to bring back Ramanuja, who found shelter in a Panchama village. It is out of gratitude for this protection that he ordained the admission of the latter into the temple on the car festival. The consecration of the image and the completion of the temple are placed in 1021 Saka.

or 1099 A D, which appears to antedate the event much. He had to make good his position here again against everybody else, and held a successful disputation against the Banddhas of Padmagiri (Sravana Belgola). He then resided at Tirunarasimapuram expecting news from the South.

RAMANUJA RETURNS TO SRIRANGAM

While Ramanuja was busy doing the important things detailed above, Kurathalvar and Periyanaambi went to the Chola court in obedience to the royal summons. There the question was put to them whether they subscribed to the statement Sivat Parataram Asti / Kurathalvar subscribed with a reservation Dronamasti Tatahaparam. "There is Drona above Siva" taking Siva in the sense of a measure, Drona being a bigger measure. For this impertinence the angry king ordered the putting out of the eyes of the two Vaishnavas. Periyanaambi, a venerable old man, died on the way, but the sturdier Kurathalvar, nothing daunted, returned and lived at Srirangam. After a time the Chola ruler died of a carbuncle, which the Vaishnavas put down to be the result of the ruler's cruelty to the devoted adherents of Ramanuja. News of the death of the Chola was taken to Ramanuja by the messenger whom he had sent to condole with Kurathalvar in his misfortune. On receipt of this somewhat assuring news Ramanuja made up his mind to return.

ORGANISATION OF THE ADHYAYANOTSAVA AND THE COLLECTION OF THE PRABANDHA

Consoling his beneficent disciple as best he could,

Ramanuja had to set about arranging matters for the Adhyayanotsava (an annual festival for the recitation of the works of the Tamil Saints) for which it was the practice to fetch the image of Nammalvar from Alvar Tirunagari in the Tinnevely District. This having been a year of heavy rainfall it was found impossible to bring the image of the Alvar all the way. Ramanuja in consequence consecrated a shrine and restored the image of the Alvar in Srirangam itself, so that no similar difficulty might be experienced for the future. It was on the occasion of this festive celebration that one of the disciples of Kurathalvar dedicated the centum in honour of Ramanuja on the model of the decad of Madhurakavi on Nammalvar. Amudan of Arangam the author of the centum, it would appear, was the Smartha manager of the temple at Srirangam, and had been not over accommodating to the Vaishnava apostle or his disciples. When his old mother was drawing near her end, the son dutifully enquired if she desired anything he might do for her. She wished that either Ramanuja himself or one of his nominees might be invited to accept food of him on the occasion of her funeral ceremonies. Amudan had no alternative but to make the request of Ramanuja, who advised that his indomitable disciple Kurathalvar might be asked. The latter accepted the invitation and demanded for satisfaction the keys of the temple which Amudan surrendered and became hence-forward the disciple of Kurathalvar. This Amudan in his new-born zeal composed the centum and begged hard that it might be accepted. Ramanuja accepted the dedication and permitted its inclusion in the prabandha 4000 at the earnest pleadings of his first disciples. Having made provision for the regular annual recital of this 4000, Ramanuja got images of the Alvars and Andal set up in Srirangam and other important places, where also similar annual celebrations were ordained.

CONSECRATION OF THE GOVINDARAJA SHRINE AT TIRUPATHI

He then paid a visit to Alvar Tirunagari and on his return heard that his maternal uncle at Tirupathi was no more. He then repaired thither and got the funeral ceremonies duly performed by the elder of the two cousins of his, the younger of whom he had long regarded as his son in apostolic succession. It was while he was yet here that he heard that the Govindaraja temple at Tirupathi had been overthrown and the image cast into the sea. He caused the image to be brought over, and housed it in the temple at the foot of the sacred hill where again he caused to be set up the images of the Alvars and Andal as elsewhere.

PILGRIMAGE TO HOLY PLACES

He then returned to Srirangam by way of Kanchi and Madhurantakam. He then went to Tirumahirunjolai and Srivilliputtur to complete his round of pilgrimage to the sacred shrines of Vishnu in the South. Having thus established his influence throughout South India and having organised and popularised the teachings of Visishtadvaita Vedanta he could now think his mission was at an end.

of contemporaries and one of them had been read before Ramanuja and obtained his imprimatur. This is the work of Amman of Arangam and consists of one hundred stanzas in Tamil included in the Prahandha of the Tamil part of the Vaishnava lore. The other is the work of a disciple also, by name Vaduhanambu, (or in Sanskrit Andhrapurana) perhaps because he was a Telugu man. This is called Iathiraja Vaibhavam and consists of 114 slokas. This work describes all that Ramanuja did in a way so free from exaggeration that it would strike one as being particularly reliable. The name of the author occurs among the 74 successors of first degree of Ramanuja and his obligation to the master is indicated in the sloka quoted hereunder :

“Kamschid kasminschid arthe prathiniyathathaya
sanniyoyyantharangair, thathra kshirarthā kritye prati niyathamaho dasamapyathyanarham kurvan sriman yathissavapathavinatha thathdasannadasam mamapyath-yanthabaktam svabithatōva sadha gopayan sopi payat Having ordered his most trusted disciples to accept particular offices, Ramanuja “who protected his worthy servant, servant of his servants, entrusted with the service of providing milk, may he prosper. It now remains to examine historically what truth there is in the above account from available historical material and how far certain impressions that prevail regarding Ramanuja and his teachings find justification from his life and times.

Having recounted the incidents in the life of Ramanuja in the previous sections of the paper, we shall now proceed to examine critically whether the main incidents of his life are what his disciples claim them to have been and whether recent research, so far as it bears upon these, lends any support to these as a whole. The following incidents will be examined seriatim, as they appear to be arranged in chronological order —

1 Ramanyja's conversion of Yadavaprakasa, his preceptor

2 His conversion of Yegnamurti, an Advaita Sannyasin

3 Settlement of the Smartha Vaishnava dispute about the God at Tirupathi

4 The Chola persecution of Ramanuja

5 The Hoysala Vishnuvardhana's conversion

6 Foundation of the temple at Tirunarayanapuram (Melkote)

7 The conversion of Amudan of Arangam, the author of Ramanuja Vurraandhadhi

8 The consecration of the Govinda temple at the foot of the Tirupathi Hill

For the purpose of this again we shall, as far as possible, have recourse to such works of reliable authority, as those of Ramanuja's contemporaries and immediate successors only

1 Yadavaprakasa was an advaitic teacher of reputation at Conjeevaram. He was also a writer of authority in his philosophy, and in his days and after he was a leader of a school of thought, that as the best representative of advaitic exposition, Vedantha Desika quotes him and disputes his position. He is the reputed author of Yatidharma Samuchchayam and of the Yadava Nikandu according to others the two works are from separate persons. At any rate the Yadava of the former work is in all probability, the philosophical expounder of the advaitic system. In the face of these facts, it would appear impossible that he should have been the first convert to the teachings of his ex-disciple Ramanuja, whom he did not love overmuch as a disciple. So it does, and I had long thought that the story was a pious fabrication. There is no reference in the Yatidharma Samuchchayam to his conversion at all. This is a work which undertakes to examine what the duties of a sannyasi are according to the best authority, and he seems to hold that there is good authority for both classes of sannyasins—those with the sacred thread and tuft of hair on the head (the Vaishnava) and those without these adjuncts (the Saiva). Except a reference to the 'Prabhandas' in the invocatory verse and the invocation itself being addressed to Vishnu as Dattatrya, the work is non-committing in this particular. But the work, Ramanuja Nurrandhadhi of Amndan of Arangam, one of his own converts, refers often to success in disputation against great controversialists, but does not mention names though the references are such as would warrant the inference that they were in particular Yadavaprakasa and the sannyasin Yegnamurti (Stanzas 58, 64 and 88). But in two works of Vedanta Desika coming just three generations after or say about a century, we have direct references to the purpose. The first half of verse 13 of Ethirya Saptati refers to "Srabhalat Uddhrita Yadavaprakasa" (he that had up-rooted with his own strength Yadavaprakasa). This need not necessarily mean conversion but that such was actually the case is clearly stated in one of his other works, Sata-dhushani.* Vedanta Desika followed Ramanuja at an interval of three generations only and we might take him as a sufficient authority for the fact, as he takes Yadava's opinions and seriously controverts them in other parts of his works.

ii As to Yegnamurti's conversion we are not in a position to say anything as nothing more is known of him than the fact, perhaps of his having been a sannyasin (Ekadhandi).

iii The question about Tirupathi is of far greater importance, the more so as there has recently been going on a lively controversy about the same subject.

* I am obliged for this reference to Tarkathurtha Panditaratnam Kasturirangachar of Mysore.

असमीक्षितदशापरित्यक्तवयसूत्रैश्च यादवप्रकाशे समीक्ष्यसंजातानुशयै
स्वनेषप्रमाणमनुयुक्ता वासुदेवयात्रात्सर्वसमागता ननादिगन्तवास्तत्र्यशि- ष्टाश्च प्रायश्चित्तमेव उत्तरंददु अष्टस्ताई असाविति चेन्न । प्रायश्चित्तात्पूर्-
वमेव तथात्वस्य प्राचीनैर्निश्चितत्वात् । तत्समुचितस्यैव मतिचर्मस्याद्यापि
मानवादिवद्विनाशान् .— ।

शतदूषणी—यैतिलिङ्गमेदमङ्गम् 64

ततश्च परित्यक्तयज्ञोपवीतादीनेषु एकदग्दिक्केष्वपि अत्रापि आयुष्मती
विप्रतिपत्ति भास्करयादवप्रकाशादि अन्यरसायन सेवयानिवर्तते ॥

शतदूषणी—अलेपकममतङ्गम् 65

in the columns of the journals and papers consequent on Mr Venkyya's reference to the temple having been Saivite in his official report. It will be seen that the Vaishnava account has it that the God on the hill had just lent his characteristic weapons, the disc and the conch, to the Tondaman Chakravarti. Let it be noted here, in passing, that this evidently refers to the conquest of Kalingam by Karṇakara Tondaman about 1111 A.D. Messrs M. Narayanasami Iyer, B.A., B.L., and T. A. Gopinatha Rao, M.A., have both written concerning this in the Sen Tamal. The former inclines to the Vaishnava view and the latter to the Saiva. The question, therefore, needs to be examined with care. The following facts concerning the point appear to be agreed upon. The Tevaram hymnners have not at all celebrated the shrine, the Vaishnava Alvars have. The Tamil epic Silappadhikaram has explicitly given the temple a Vaishnava character and there is no possibility of mistake here. On this account, therefore, Mr Gopinatha Rao would bring the Silappadhikaram after Poygai Alvar (whether he brings it also after Ramanuja is not quite clear, though he shows a leaning to bring it to the middle of the 12th century). This gentleman holds that the original God was Subrahmanya as the place is called 'Ilangoil' and the God is referred to once or twice as 'Kumara' though not without other adjuncts. The latter is quite decisive according to him. So it would be, if the premises have been quite as they are represented to be. One fundamental defect here is the taking out of words without reference to their context Mr. Gopinath Rao refers to the God being known as Balajee among the Northerners. This may be, but Balajee is not exclusively applied to Subrahmanya, if applied to him at all. I have here numbers of persons known as Balajee, but the word stands for Balakrishna. This is equally sound; there is something more. The early Alvars, Poyga Alvar, Bhutattar, Pey Alvar delight in referring to God in one of his aspects as a child either as Rama or Krishna preferably the latter. One has only to look through the writings of these to be convinced of this. Why they do so is beside the point. It is this Balakrishna—he is not so named in the work—that has given rise to the name Balajee*. Since, Krishna, as Vitha is very popular in the Mahratta country. Anyhow this interpretation of Balajee is in keeping with the writings of the Alvars who had bestowed their best thoughts upon God's manifestation at Tirupathi. Pey Alvar lends the greatest support to this contention as to the nature of the deity. He refers to the God as இளங்குமரன் நன் விண்ணகா (61), விளங்கனிஞ்சு கனறெறிகதோன் வெற்பு (68), இளங்குமரா கோமாளிடம் (72) நன் முத்ததோன் நன்குறவெல, வாயதஞ்ஞவியாய (77). It will thus be seen that he refers to the same deity in the four different ways as above. They are of course to be taken synonymously. References one and three may be doubtful, but the other two must be sought to help us in the interpretation. Reference 2 clearly indicates one of the acts of young Krishna, and reference, 4, though not equally clearly, to an achievement of Vishnu, when Brahma was about to grant the boons sought of him by Ravana. If a more direct indication be needed, the stanza 62 makes it clear to any unprejudiced mind. There are a number of places sacred to Vishnu and the names given are Vaishnavite names e.g., Tiruvarangam and Thirukudandhai—(Kumhhalonam). There is thus nothing to bear out the contention that the God there was ever meant to be Subrahmanya. Stanza 63 of the same 3rd Tiruvandadi states clearly that the manifestation of God there is in the united form of Siva and Vishnu. This is borne out by the stanzas 5 & 98 of the 1st Tiruvandadi. This would, therefore, make it clear that the God was of the Harihara type. Then the question arises why it is that Ilango speaks of it as a Vishnu temple in such clear terms. The explanation perhaps would be that the temple had been known only as a Vishnu temple, though there was the duplex character in the idol. This could be noticed only by a devotee who was in close touch with the temple which Ilango could not pretend to have been. There would be nothing very strange about this if most people now-a-days do not know it. Its established reputation as a Vishnu temple accounts for the omission of Tirupathi by the Nayanmars of the Saivites. How then was it that the Saivites laid claim to it in the days of Ramanuja? Ramanuja's time was remarkable for the revival of the Prabandam which was being taught much more widely than before. Besides this, Ramanuja's cousin's conversion must have made the Saivites alive to the danger of this Vaishnava neighbourhood. So on the old grounds of the dual form of the God they revived their claims, particularly as the ruling sovereign was likely to lean to the Saiva side. Naturally enough Ramanuja appealed to a trial by ordeal of some sort. Ever after, there appears to have been no dispute as to the character of the deity. This must have taken place sometime after 1111 A. D., the probable date of the conquest of Kalingam.

* When last at Tirupathi I heard another version. When the Northerners first appeared at the shrine they were struck with the softly beautiful look of the image and exclaimed Bala (damsel). Hence the name Balajee as they say.

iv The next item of importance in the life of Ramanuja is the Chola persecution. The Chola ruler at the time was Kulothunga, the Chalukya Chola (1070—1118 A. D.). The Cholas were Saivas most of them, but they were tolerant enough of other religions as well, while some of them even went the length of endowing Vishnu temples. This Kulothunga does not appear to have been particularly narrow minded as he made a grant even to the Buddha settlement at Naga-patam. But as the Vaishnava account itself has it, he was persuaded by others into compelling all to assent to the doctrine of the supremacy of Siva. This is not at all improbable considering that this was the period of great Saiva activity and the ruler was the special patron of Sekkilar. The general body of Vaishnavas do not appear to have been ill treated, but Ramanuja's active work at Srirangam attracted attention and ended in the blinding of Korravalvar and the old preceptor of Ramanuja himself. This must have taken place about the nineties of the 11th century. And Ramanuja was compelled to leave the country. His immigration into the Mysore country brings us to the next important incident in his life.

v & vi. He moved up the Kavery and settled at Saligram, wherefrom he had been invited to the headquarters of Vitala Deva Raya or Bitti Deva. This latter could not have been the ruling sovereign at the time as his brother was alive to the end of the century and a few years later. During the last years of the century he was still active in the Gangavadi frontier, and it was while here that he must have met Ramanuja. His elder brother "had for his God Isa" and this meant perhaps he was a Saiva. Bitti Deva was converted and he helped Ramanuja in the restoration of the temple of Narayana at Melukote. I have elsewhere* shown that the persecution of the Jains ascribed to Vishnuvardhana is hardly supported by facts. The consecration of the temple at Melukote is placed in the year 1099 A. D. twelve years after Ramanuja's arrival at Saligram. This might have been the case as Ramanuja would have taken care not to provoke the hostility of the ruler of his new domicile. Vishnuvardhana thenceforward supported the cause of Ramanuja and encouraged Vishnavism. He went on building temples and endowing them, not without supporting the other temples and creeds as well, though not perhaps to the same extent. This activity culminated clearly enough, the main achievements of Ramannja and thus becomes the contemporary authority for most of the facts of Ramannja's life as detailed above. The moderation of tone and sobriety of language commend its authority the more, as else Ramannja would not have been persuaded into including it among the Prabandam 4000

* Mysore Review for March, 1900 (Vide Appendix)

viii Lastly comes the construction and consecration of the Govinda shrine at the foot of the Tirupathi Hill. This affords the best clue to the date of Ramannja. The Guruparamparai gives this as the last act of a busy life under circumstances which, thanks to the researches of Brahma Sri R. Raghava Iyengar, Court Pandit of Ramnad and Editor of the Sen Tamil, the organ of the Madura Tamil Sangam, prove to be quite historical. The story it will be remembered is that the Govinda Raja temple at Chidambaram having been removed from the premises of the great Siva temple, Ramannja and his disciples got the idol enshrined in a new temple at Tirupathi. In a number of historical works relating to the period, particularly in the Kulothunga Cholan Ula of Ottakuthan,* this achievement is ascribed to Kulothunga II, the son and successor of Vikrama Chola and one of the patrons of Kuthan himself. There it is described that he renovated the Saiva temple and plated the roofing with gold—incidentally mentioning that the "God Vishnu had been sent back to his original shrine—the sea" †

* Sen Tamil Vol III, Pt 5 pp (166—167)

† Sen Tamil Vol III, Pt 8 pp (301—302.)

This would mean not only the removal but the throwing of the image into the sea. In another there is a reference to Kulothunga's having rooted out the minor Gods from the great shrine. This must have taken place in the reign of Kulothunga II (cir. 1123-1146). That the Vaishnavas were enabled to enshrine the God at Tirupathi perhaps shows the limitation of the Chola authority at the time or their indifference to the fact, provided the obnoxious God had been removed from the hallowed presence of their "Holy of Holies," a place full of the most narrow minded of the Saivites. That the Vishnu shrine was previously in the temple at Chidambaram is borne out by a reference in the works of Manikka Vasagar (Tiruchchirambalakhovai, 86). There is absolutely no reason to doubt the authority of these works about this particular and this would give us the ultimate limits of Ramanuja's active life. According to the traditional account Ramanuja lived for 120 years from 1017 A.D.—1137 A.D. Some object to this length and regard it as a fabrication just to give the reformer the 'Mahadasa' as it is called. It is a matter of very small consequence to us whether he lived the 120 years or no. What is more important for our purposes is that his was a long and active life and covered three reigns of the Cholas—Kulothunga I (1070 A.D. to 1118 A.D.), Vikramachola (1118 A.D.—1135 A.D.), Kulothunga II (1123—1146 A.D.). Ramanuja's active life might, therefore, be safely referred to the last quarter of the 11th and the first half of the 12th century A.D.

is an attribute as well, in its nature of universal pervasion. Again Brahman is real, satya. By this is understood that he is without vilāsa or modification of any kind. The souls and matter are asatya or unreal, which again means that they are subject to modification, which is necessarily an element of impurity. In the case of souls, this modification takes the form of expansion or contraction of Intelligence. In mineral, plant or animal life, the soul, under karmic control, is dull or of suppressed Intelligence. The modifications of matter are of a more serious kind. In the creation and expansion of the universe, matter undergoes a real modification of its nature. Such change is called parinama or evolution, as contrasted with vicāra or apparent variation, which is the view of the Advaitin. The Viśiṣṭadvaitin holds that, in spite of the souls and matter being pervaded by Brahman, any modifications of them though under Brahman's control, do not touch His essence, just as the Advaitin maintains that the operation of Atidya do not affect the one Reality. The 'unreality' of the cosmos is thus another point of agree-and niyamyā or the controlled, of the ^{out} the throw-

 The word Brahman is thus used either ^{her}, there is a central naity, when it becomes possible out the ^{the} true souls and matter, as its attributes, ^{to} to denote the combined trinity when the whole universe may properly be described as consisting of Brahman and Brahman alone. The Visishtadwaitin does not make the unphilososophical statement that the souls are absolutely independent entities, endowed with the capacity of separate existence and activity, apart from Brahman.

THE FUNDAMENTAL ATTRIBUTES

The Brahman (as the word in the first of the above senses) is Intelligence. It is something more—it is the Knower. Where attributes are denied, and all that exists is homogenous intelligence, as in the Advaita, there can be no knower, for there is nothing to know. But for the Visishtadwaitin, Brahman is a knower, and the variety, philosophically essential for knowledge, is furnished by the attributes. Brahman is Bliss, ^{he} he is blissful, for a mixture of the opposite, pain, is unimaginable in his case. It will thus be seen that besides the attributes of souls and matter, which may be called 'the concrete attributes' if such a phrase
 may be used, Brahman has various abstract attributes qualities strictly so called, denoting his perfection from various points of view. The Visishtadwaitin considers 'Intelligence' as partaking of the dual character of an abstract and a concrete attribute, and he instances
 'light' as an example of the possibility of such an attribute. Intelligence is the essence of Brahman, it is an attribute as well, in its nature of universal pervasion. Again Brahman is real, satya. By this is understood that he is without vikāra or modification of any kind. The souls and matter are asatya or unreal, which again means that they are subject to modification, which is necessarily an element of impurity. In the case of souls, this modification takes the form of expansion or contraction of Intelligence. In mineml, plant or animal life, the soul, under Larmic control, is dull or of suppressed Intelligence. The modifications of matter are of a more serious kind. In the creation and expansion of the universe, matter undergoes a real modification of its nature. Such change is called parinama or evolution, as contrasted with vivarta or apparent variation, which is the view of the Advaitin. The Visishtadwaitin holds that, in spite of the souls and matter being pervaded by Brahman, any modifications of them though under Brahman's control, do not touch His essence, just as the Advaitin maintains that the operation of Aviḍya do not affect the one Reality. The 'unreality' of the cosmos is thus another point of agreement between the Advaitin and the Visishtadwaitin; but this, it must be admitted, is merely a nominal agreement, considering the important diversity in their conceptions of the unreality. The Visishtadwaitin would thus call Brahman, 'Sat,' and the first 'Asat,' in a narrower sense, he reserves the epithet 'Asat' to Matter, which undergoes change in its essence, unlike the souls whose essence is like to the Brahman's and never changes.

TWO STATES OF BRAHMAN

There are two states of existence for the Brahman. One is absolute quiescence or pralaya, when all the souls and matter exist in Him in deep sleep as it were. No differentiation is possible in that stage between the souls and matter, these are then, as it were, non-existent. 'Sat alone exists, one without a second'. Existence is the only phrase that can be applied to the Brahman then, as volition, not to speak of creation, is potential or has not commenced to work. Then begins the second stage, creation. To the Advaitin, creation is a negative, an unreal, act. It is the clouding of the pure Intelligence of Brahman by the inexplicable Avidya, which produces the manifestation of apparent diversity. The Vishishtadvaitin considers creation as a positive volitional effort of the Brahman to display real diversity, by actualising the energy for change which is innate in both the souls and matter. Sa Aikshata bahu syam prajayeya it. 'He thought, may I become many, may I grow forth'. The antah pravesa 'entry within' which the Upanishads speak of as taking place at creation is not strictly true. To the Vishishtadvaitin, it means only the Brahman's willing to develop His inseparable attributes, souls and matter, for Brahman was 'within' even before creation. To the Advaitin, the antah pravesa is entirely metaphorical. The language of the Parinidhana Vada is used in his view, merely for facility of comprehension.

THE PURPOSE OF CREATION

The ethical justification for creation is Justice

The fruits of actions (karma) have to be bestowed, equally and impartially, and Brahman does this by endowing souls with appropriate bodies of various kinds and giving room for further functioning and display of free-will within limits, the further evolution depends on the manner in which the individual uses his opportunities. As karma is, in the Hindu view, beginningless, it becomes unnecessary to account for its origin. To the objection that Brahman could have no purpose, being without wants, in engaging itself in creation, the reply is, in the words of the author of the Sūtras, lōkāt tu līlā karmalyam (II 1 33), it is mere recreation, as in ordinary life. In other words, as no compulsion can be predicated of the Brahman to evolve the universe, the Viśiṣṭādvaitin accounts for it by the only other possible alternative, that it is mere recreation for the Brahman, but the strictest justice for the souls concerned. Sāṅkhya adds the explanation that His innate nature (svabhāva) is to create, which does not carry us much further, and then reminds us that the whole discussion is unreal, as Brahman is never the agent of creation.

THE AUTHORITY OF REVELATION

To the Viśiṣṭādvaitin, as to the Advaitin, the Vedas and Smṛitis are the sole and independent authority for the knowledge of Brahman. Reason has no operation except in matters perceptible by the senses. Transcendental notions as those with respect to the nature and attributes of Brahman and the souls, can only be got from Revelation. This position appears illogical, dethroning, as it does, Reason, the accepted instrument of correct conclusion in all processes of thought. To explain this anomaly, we have to dwell a little on the exact place assigned to reason by Sāṅkara as well as Ramanuja. Reason is an indefinite word. It depends for its correctness, on the intellectual capacity of the person arguing, the extent of his information and other circumstances. Until a fallacy is exposed, an argument is apparently sound. Then it is up to the conclusion has to be reached by other reasonings. This want of finality in mere reason is referred to in the Sūtras (II 1-11) and is the cause of the Vedāntic systems rejecting it as a sufficient authority in the knowledge of Brahman. In as the Nyāyikas did. The argument from design in an as the Nyāyikas did. The endowed intelligent first cause best establish a highly lead to the conception of a first cause, but could not cause. And so, the help of mere first Brahman as first competent determining factor in the rejection of Brahman, as first cause, is rejected. Every establishment of taken to mean that the Hindu Vedāntism is a sufficiently mentation in their philosophy. Every establishment of writings is a standing monument of the skill of their subtlest reasonings. According to them, reject arguments reasoning is two-fold. It has, in the skill in the scope in matters which do not transcend the purpose of. In the second place, it is a valuable adjunct to the senses. where the texts of the Vedas are to be found. As it so happens that most important truths are liable to be disputed as to their meanings, we are liable to ing that there is full room for logical interpretation with respect to them. To say that explicit Vedic texts are unquestionable authorities means one of two things, either that we take them as the conclusions of great minds reached after acute reasoning, on matters which our feeble intellects could not sufficiently comprehend, or we consider them to be the records of unique direct experiences of men who had trained their powers of mental perception by methods to which we have no access. Neither position is inconceivable or necessarily absurd. So many scientific positions are accepted by the general body of educated men all over the world on the faith of representations that those positions have been verified by some one by actual experiments. There may be danger of mistakes and misstatements in either case, but those like Sankara and Ramanuja, who do not feel the position of an agnostic satisfactory or comfortable, have preferred to base their ontological position on revelation, while fully trusting to their capacity for ratiocination to meet objections on the part of those who do not subscribe to the authority of the Vedas. Between these two, there is, however, a difference. Sankara includes the *Śruti*s and *Smṛti*s among ephemeral things whose purpose is served when once oneness is realised. Ramanuja considers them as always authoritative and as expressive of the eternal commands of the Deity whose breath they are said to be. An important difference arises between these two thinkers, based on this distinction. In Sankara's view the compulsory nature of ordained duties last only as nirguna, attributeless. Others describe him as having attributes or qualities like wisdom, power, etc. As truth can be only one, the natural question arises whether these texts can be reconciled in any manner. Sankara's view is that predominance must be given to the nirguna texts, as the others have the effect of limiting the Infinite, which should not be done. Hence texts like 'Ekam eva Advaityam,' one only, without a second,' neha nana Asti,' there is here no diversity, etc. are interpreted by him, without much striving, as establishing the absolute oneness of the Brahman. And the other texts are relegated to an inferior position and made to refer to an imaginary and inferior Brahman called apara or lower Brahman, i.e., the Brahman in conjunction with its creative power called maya. Ramanuja's difficulty seems to be that this sharp division of the passages into those referring to the higher and those referring to the lower Brahman is not easily and directly inferable from the texts themselves. On the other hand, the passages are so mixed up that it is impossible to say that this distinction, if true, was ever prominently kept up. His reconciliation is, therefore, as follows: the texts of the Upanishads do not inculcate an attributeless Brahman, the attributes are real and not the result of Avidya, the texts referring to those attributes expound the Brahman, as He is, with the souls and matter as His inseparable modes. Brahman is one, only in His compound nature, as described already. The texts denying any attributes for Him are to be taken as meaning that He has no low or inauspicious attributes, such as liability to changes, death, sorrow, etc. The texts as to creation, as mentioned already, mean a real modification of the attributes, souls and matter of the Brahman and do not mean that Brahman becomes suffused with Nescience and imagines a variety. The souls are many and God is immanent, both in them and in matter. The texts which speak of unity and deny variety do so of the totality of the Brahman with his attributes. Texts, which deny a second to Brahman, mean that there is no other controlling power in the universe apart from Him. Texts which deny the possibility of knowing Brahman, do not mean that he cannot be the object of thought as there is no thinker, they mean only that His wonderful and priceless excellences or qualities could not be adequately described. Else, according to Ramanuja, they would conflict with hosts of passages which prescribe knowledge of Brahman and ascribe qualities to Him. The text of the Brihad Aranyaka II 3 6 which contains the famous words "neti neti" 'not so not so' and is taken by Sankara to teach the negation of all attributes is interpreted by Ramanuja (Sutras III 2 21) as merely denying the possibility of adequate knowledge of the Brahman. "This interpretation" says he, "is confirmed by the fact that after the negative phrase comes an epithet of Brahman as 'the True of the True, for the Pranas are the True'" Ramanuja interprets this text to mean that the Pranas or the individual souls are satya or 'true,' i.e., not subject to change in their essence, while the Supreme Self is never leads, a clear account of which is to be found in Professor Karghacharya's 'Analytical outline' prefixed to his valuable translation of the Śrī Bhāṣya, Vol. I. Rāmānuja's objections are of this kind: The Avidyā cannot operate on the Brahman, directly, for Its nature is Intelligence and this would repel Nescience by its intrinsic merit. Nor can it operate on the individual souls, for these are the outcome of the action of Avidyā and cannot, therefore, be acted upon in a reciprocal manner. Again, to state that Nescience clouds the Brahman is impossible, for that would mean that Brahman's luminous nature is thereby destroyed, a position which is not admissible. Avidyā, again, as defined by Sankara, is in Rāmānuja's view, inadmissible, as the simultaneous possession of two opposite characters, as existence and non-existence, cannot be predicated of anything in human conception. Rāmānuja further, does not think that to describe Avidyā as 'indefinable' really strengthens the position of Sankara, for if a thing is absolutely indescribable, it must be non-existent as an entity. Then inauspicious attributes, such as liability to changes, death, sorrow, etc. The texts as to creation, as mentioned already, mean a real modification of the attributes, souls and matter of the Brahman and do not mean that Brahman becomes suffused with Nescience and imagines a variety. The souls are many and God is immanent, both in them and in matter. The texts which speak of unity and deny variety do so of the totality of the Brahman with his attributes. Texts, which deny a second to Brahman, mean that there is no other controlling power in the universe apart from Him. Texts which deny the possibility of knowing Brahman, do not mean that he cannot be the object of thought as there is no thinker, they mean only that His wonderful and priceless excellences or qualities could not be adequately described. Else, according to Ramanuja, they would conflict with hosts of passages which prescribe knowledge of Brahman and ascribe qualities to Him. The text of the Brihad Aranyaka II 3 6 which contains the famous words "neti neti" "not so not so" and is taken by Sankara to teach the negation of all attributes is interpreted by Ramanuja (Sutras III 2 21) as merely denying the possibility of adequate knowledge of the Brahman. "This interpretation" says he, "is confirmed by the fact that after the negative phrase comes an epithet of Brahman as 'the True of the True, for the Pranas are the True'" Ramanuja interprets this text to mean that the Pranas or the individual souls are satya or 'true,' i.e., not subject to change in their essence, while the Supreme Self altogether real or unchangeable. "He is, therefore, more eminently true than they (the souls) are."

THE THEORY OF CAUSATION.

The theory of causation has profoundly exercised the minds of all Hindu philosophers; the Vedantins, like the Sankhyas, maintain the oneness of cause and effect in essence, as opposed to the logicians who maintain that they are different. In what sense, then, is the world which is an effect, one with its cause? Ramanujann has a topic discussing this point. (Sutra, I. IV. 23, etc.) Here he maintains that the Brahman is not merely the instrumental cause, but also the material cause of the universe. He is, in the position, not merely of the potter but also of the mud, to give an illustration familiar to Indian philosophers. A succeeding Sutra, (I. 4. 27,) refers to the way in which Brahman as the cause becomes the effect. It is by 'parinama' or owing to modification. In Ramanuja's view the oneness of cause and effect arises from the fact that the cause is the Brahman in the sukshma or subtle state; when the souls and matter are undeveloped and the effect is Brahman also, now comprised of the Supreme Self and the souls and matter, the latter in a fully developed state.* Sankara, practically admitting the interpretation of the Sutras given above, would, however, explain the modification as 'Vivarta' really, i.e., phenomenal creation, by Brahman as influenced by Avidya or Maya. That the two philosophers are entirely at variance in their view of this oneness is also clear from their respective commentaries on the important Sutra II-1-15, (14, in Sankara's numbering) a discussion of which would be out of place in this brief exposition. We would only draw attention to an important and suggestive statement of Sankaracharya, at the close of his commentary of the above Sutra, that Badarayana, in his view, omits to contradict the reality of the manifested world and adopts the language of the Parinama Vada, for the purpose of facilitating the exposition of the signa meditations later on in the work.

* The phrase 'Vishvadvaitam' is sometimes explained as the oneness or identity and the two Vishvadvaita entities mentioned in the text, as cause and effect.

THE DOCTRINE OFnescience

Ramanuja's Sribhashya is remarkable for the lengthy disquisition on various topics by which his actual commentary on the Sutras is preceded. In this disquisition, he treats of various controversial points and expounds fully his differences of views from those of Sankara. One of the most important of these is his statement of objections to the theory of Maya or Avidya, which is a fundamental one in Sankara's philosophy and is, at the same time, the most vulnerable point in it. Is this Avidya different from or identical with Brahman? The former view would seem to undermine Sankara's doctrine of oneness and the latter is equally untenable. Sankara cuts the Gordian knot by boldly declaring that it (the Avidya) is Sadasadanirvachaniya, i. e., it is indescribable as either existing or non-existing. Ramanuja expounds at great length his difficulties as to the tenability of the Maya theory, under seven heads, a clear account of which is to be found in Professor Rangbacharya's 'Analytical outline' prefixed to his valuable translation of the Sri Bhasya, Vol. I. Ramanuja's objections are of this wise. The Avidya cannot operate on the Brahman, directly, for His nature is Intelligence and this would repel Nescience by its intrinsic merit. Nor can it operate on the individual souls, for these are the outcome of the action of Avidya and cannot, therefore, be acted upon in anticipation. Again, to state that Nescience clouds the Brahman is impossible, for that would mean that Brahman's luminous nature is thereby destroyed, a position which is not admissible. Avidya, again, as defined by Sankara, is in Ramanuja's view, inconceivable, as the simultaneous possession of two opposite characters, as existence and non existence, cannot be predicated of anything in human conception. Ramanuja, further, does not think that to describe Avidya as 'indecribable' really strengthens the position of Sankara, for if a thing is absolutely indecribable, it must be non-existent as an entity. Then Ramanuja points out that such an Avidya cannot be proved to exist by any known means of proof including Vedic or Smṛiti texts, if such an Avidya should exist, it is irremovable, says Ramanuja, for the knowledge of attributeless Brahman required to remove it, is according to him an impossible thing, such a Brahman not being provable. Lastly, such an Avidya is irremovable for another reason. In Ramanuja's view the ignorance, being the result of karma, can be removed only by enjoined action and meditation. Mere knowledge of Brahman cannot remove it. For all the e reasons, Ramanuja concludes that the theory of Maya is untenable and opposed to the tenor of the Vedic texts.

CONCLUSION

It is not the purpose of this sketch to explain all Ramanuja's objections to Sankaracharya's views. What has been attempted is only the setting forth of Ramanuja's views on important points with just so much reference to the doctrines of Sankara, as is necessary to understand Ramanuja. To really grasp the vital differences between these two eminent philosophers, and to arrive at a proper estimate of their relative merits, would mean a thorough discussion of three important questions, namely, (1) who is the better interpreter of the Upanishads, (2) who has more accurately represented the views of the Vedanta Sutras, and (3) who is entitled to greater respect as a philosophical thinker. These are questions of so difficult a nature that they are entirely beyond our scope and capacity. Enough has, however, been said to show that Ramanuja when he becomes better known, would most certainly be deemed entitled to a high place among the world's philosophers, and his system, though not possessing the simplicity or universality of Sankaracharya's, is yet an eminently sound one, compatible with the admission of the reality of the cosmos and a high conception of the nature and attributes of the Deity.

Ramanuja and Vaishnavism.*

BY

RAO BAHADUR PROF M RANGACHARYA M A

VAISHNAVAISM is a very old form of religion known to the History of Civilisation in India. How old it is, it is not now possible to determine, but it is certain that its sources may be traced to the Vedas. Vishnu in Vedic literature is seen to be a solar deity, and is conceived as an all pervading god. It is in accordance with a very widely accepted Indian derivation of the word to interpret Vishnu as a pervader, and the conception of this same god as Trivikrama—as the god who was able to cover the whole universe in three strides—is also distinctly Vedic in origin. Moreover, as a god he is said to have his place in the supreme heaven, in Vishnoh paramam padam, as it is called in the Vedas. Modern European scholars consider that this parama pada of Vishnu is, in all probability, the position of the sun in the zenith. This is obviously the highest position conceivable that may be occupied by any object during the day. Thus Vishnu was of old a solar deity who occupied the highest heaven, and was at the same time capable of pervading with his light and life all the three worlds making up the visible universe, the earth world, the mind world and the sky-world. The all pervading god and the god who occupies the highest heaven—such evidently is the conception underlying Vishnu in Vedic literature. From this conception as its source has arisen Vaishnavism, which, in its various forms, is now recognised to be the most predominant and the most popular religion among the Hindus. To ascertain and describe the position occupied by Ramanuja in relation to the progress and development of this great religion is the main aim which I intend to keep in view in my lecture.

*From a lecture by Rao Bahadur Prof M Rangachariar M A. of the Madras Presidency College

The primary conception underlying the original deity is a matter of great importance in determining the course of development of the religion associated with that deity. This can be amply illustrated by means of instances that may be gathered from the history of religions. There is, for instance, another solar deity in Vedic literature, who goes by the name of MITRA, and this god Mitra, understood as the Sanskrit language requires, is the sun-god conceived as a friend. This Mitra is not merely a god of our Vedas, but is a god known to the Zend-Avesta of the Parsees as well. He seems therefore to have been a god held in honor by the Iranian as well as by the Indian Aryas even before they separated from each other. That separation must of course have taken place very very long ago. It may well be that this Mitra was a deity worshipped in Persia before Zoroaster taught his religion—the modern religion of the Parsees. A great French savant, Ernest Renan, has solemnly remarked that, if Christianity had not gone to Europe, in all probability Mitraism would have become the religion of Europeans In saying this he evidently pays a very high compliment to this religion of MITRA and draws our attention to the tendency of that religion to be helpful to man in the way of encouraging in him purity, love, piety and righteousness. He even seems to grant that the moral influence of that religion could indeed have been in no way inferior to that which Christianity has had among Europeans and Americans. Now, can it be said that the original conception of this god as a friend has had no power or part in determining the really superior moral merit of Mitraism? Surely its friendly god must have done a great deal in determining the line of development of that religion.

So it must have been in connection with the religion of Vishnu also. { Moreover, we find here that, in very early times, another idea more prominently brought to light in connection with another Vedic deity, Bhaga, came to be associated with the religion of Vishnu. That other idea is in fact the conception of god Bhaga as a bestower of auspicious blessings. This god Bhaga is perhaps an older god than even Mitra. God Bhaga appears to have had an Indo-European history. He was known to the ancient religion of the Slavonians, to the ancient religion of the Parsees, and also to the ancient religion of the Aryas of this country. As the bestower of auspicious blessings, Bhaga seems to have been very highly honoured and held in great reverence as a typical god. This word bhaga in later Sanskrit literature came to assume many meanings. It may now mean the sun, but very frequently means good blessings and auspicious qualities and great powers. Thus the name of the sun-god, looked upon as a bestower of blessings and of auspicious powers, may easily be seen to have undergone a deterioration in meaning, so as to import not the god but the physical object symbolising the god, or those blessings and those powers whereof the god was originally conceived to be the bestower. When in this manner the earlier meanings of this word as the name of a god became almost forgotten among the people, the other later meaning naturally gained ground. It must be in consequence of an identification of the god himself with the power of goodness that he possessed, that the word bhaga ceased to be the name of the god and came to denote chiefly his power of goodness and grace. After this took place, we observe a change in the structure of the name of the god: that name is no longer Bhaga but Bhagavat. This changed word means the possessor of those beneficent qualities and auspicious powers which have come to be represented by the word bhaga. In that way there arose a religion in which the worship of the Bhagavat was the chief element; and in it the Bhagavat came to be looked upon as the Supreme God. The religion which has been based on this worship of the Bhagavat is called the Bhagavata religion. It appears to be distinctly described in the Mahabharata. And even European and American critics seem to be fairly in agreement in holding that the Mahabharata, in its present form, must have been well known to India not later than the 4th century before the Christian era. The Mahabharata is rightly conceived to be a work that could not have been produced at any one time by any one man. Although in the epic itself its authorship is ascribed to Vyasa, there is ample indication in it of frequent additions having been made to it in later times and this sort of growth in size must have gone on with it for some centuries. If it is true that this growth reached its culmination about the 4th century before Christ, and if we have distinct references to the Bhagavata religion in the Mahabharata, then the worship of the Bhagavat must have been current for a fairly long time before that in India. That the Bhagavat may well be traced to the Vedic Bhaga is a point which does not seem to me to be in any manner improbable. There is some reason to believe that Sri-Krishna was probably the originator of the Bhagavata religion, and Megasthenes is considered to have been well aware of the prevalence of Krishna-worship in his days in North India. Now, if Vishnu and the Bhagavat are to be identified, as they seem to have been identified from very early times in this country, thereby Vaishnavism is naturally bound to become more comprehensive and to acquire a more expanded and more lovable moral meaning. Accordingly Vaishnavism came to mean in due time the worship of an all pervading God, who is in the highest heaven, and is at the same time the bestower of all auspicious powers and benevolent blessings. Here, in this combined conception of God, we have the very heart, so introduced among a people for their immediate benefit, it invariably happens that this new institution or new idea becomes implanted upon something that is really old. And the new idea or the new institution, growing in the midst of old surroundings, absorbs and assimilates a great deal of what is old from its environment and in the result, the old and the new together sprout up in a new form so as to make the new product, viewed as a whole, more comprehensive, more beautiful and more helpful to the advancement of culture and character and civilization among the people. That is the way of progress everywhere. Whether we trace the origin, for instance, of Buddhism or Christianity, or trace the course of civilization in China or Japan or France or England or India, we invariably find that new ideas and institutions grow in the midst of old environments and under the impulse of old forces which are still alive and actively in operation. We thus learn to see that every new growth is largely the result of the assimilation of much that is old with something that is new.

In the course of the development of the sacrificial religion of the Vedas, the influence of the priests at the time became so markedly preponderant that the gods themselves almost began to disappear from the vision of the sacrificers. And what loomed largely before their eyes was the performance of the sacrifice in accordance with the strict letter of the law. Another thing which also must have loomed largely was the warding of the sacrificial priests by the payment of valuable dakshina or honorarium to them. To what extent such a decline of the true religious spirit took place may be made out from the fact that some of the later Mimamsa Jas, when dealing with the question of who the Devatas are, to whom sacrifices are offered, hastily dismissed the question itself by giving out that we need not at all trouble ourselves about who the Devatas are. They went quite so far as to say that the Devata is simply that thing the name whereof is seen inflected in the dative case in sacrificial formulas like Indraya svaha for instance. "Who is Indra?" is the question asked, let us suppose. The reply is—"Don't ask who he is. He may be anything or nothing. He is simply that thing the name of which is here in this formula inflected in the dative case." When such an answer is given to such a question, we may at once make out what relative importance must have been attached to the question of who or what the gods are, as compared with the numerous and complex details of the sacrificial ceremonial. When mere sacrificial details become too much all absorbing, all considerations regarding who or what the deity is, what its powers are, why we should worship it, were thrown into the back-ground. In fact these and other more interesting details bearing upon the question of godhood rapidly went behind the curtain. As all thought bearing upon the vital question of godhood in religion disappeared in that manner, what happened to be left behind was nothing more than mere form overloaded with numerous complicated and unattractive details involving much useless expenditure of time, wealth and labour

Naturally the common human heart would be prone to rebel against such a religion. There can indeed be no real life of any kind in an over-encrusted and fossilised shell of religion. There is nothing in it to touch the heart, and make it burn with the magic fire of spiritual fervour and moral emotion and sympathetic exaltation. It is too dry and too mechanical, too much of a sham to satisfy the deep religious longings of the aspiring and uplifted heart. In the early stages of its development Vedic religion was not like this either in its aim or in its practical use. From the very beginning it was indeed an earnest endeavour to rise from nature to Nature's God. In the hymns and prayers and chants addressed to the numerous nature-gods of the Vedas, a careful student may easily observe a growing tendency towards the realisation of what is sometimes called personal monotheism. The many gods of an earlier age become merged in the one God and are identified with Him, and this one God does not lose His divinity or His personality. Many consider that such a really divine and personal God has to be an essential element in all truly satisfying religions. Anyhow there must be for the common man in his religion something to grasp and to worship as a Supreme Power and Personality, who would lovingly come to help him in times of difficulties, and to whom he might with complete confidence surrender himself in all conditions of trial and sorrow and suffering. Religion has even been defined as a kind of self-surrender, as the surrender of themselves which men make to a Higher Power, feeling unable to look after themselves in this world of troubles and turmoils—in this world, wherein even the most thoughtful man feels that he is blind-folded and tossed about without any aid from any really capable and truly knowing guide. Such a puzzling thing is indeed this world of ours! It is in fact so full of mystery and so full of pitfalls to the earnest and thoughtful man that he naturally feels that it would be good for him to seek and obtain the support of a Supreme Power, so that he may throw himself entirely on the mercy of that Power and derive unerring guidance from It, and take safe refuge with It, whenever necessary. It is very proper that this kind of feeling should come to the human mind most commonly and most readily, particularly in times of great danger and difficulty. When such a trying hour comes, how will the over formal sacrifice, with all its elaborate details of ritual, help the aching heart of the man in trouble? How will the idea that the deity may be nothing other than what happens to be represented by the word, which is inflected in the dative case in a sacrificial formula, help him? You can all easily see that a conception of the deity, such as this, will give him no help, no support, no comfort. It is therefore very natural for the common man not to take into account the definition of the deity as given by these sacrifice-loving latter day Minimsalas. He wants his God to be real, to be supernatural and transcendental, and to be possessed at the same time of the requisite love and power to be ever near him and help him effectively.

In this way more than one of the prominent gods of the Veda began to be personally worshipped, otherwise than through the old over-formal sacrifices, gods such as Indra, Rudra, Brahma and Vishnu. We have enough evidence to indicate that many Vedic gods came to be so worshipped independently. In the course of this process some people chose one deity for their worship, while others chose other deities. Besides this, we have to take note of the fact that the Aryas who brought their Vedic religion and Aryan civilization into this land were new-comers from outside and they were comparatively few in number. Before they came to this land, other people were dwelling therein whose language and civilization were different and whose ideas and institutions were different, from those of the Aryas. These original inhabitants were, as far as we can make out with the help of available evidence—which is, however, hostile—a rather wild people who, nevertheless had a real civilization of their own, and had also an ordered social organization of their own. They were often found to be very powerful and clever in their conduct of affairs. Above all they had also a religion of their own, although this religion of theirs is declared to have been comparatively of a much lower kind than that of the Aryas. The religion that was then current among them is understood to have been characterised by the worship of the phallus, of serpents and trees and other things of that kind, and by reason of the magic and witch craft associated therewith, it appears to have been a primitive magical religion as well. These and other primitive elements of religion must have been found to exist among the original inhabitants of India, when the Aryas came in with their comparatively higher and more potent civilization. At that time these comparatively less cultured and less civilized original inhabitants could not of course grasp the meaning and aim of the Vedic chants and of the sacrificial religion of the victorious Aryas. And the Aryan priests, who were responsible for the proper conduct of the Aryan sacrifices, considered, as it was very natural in those days, that only the Aryan people were entitled to perform those Aryan sacrifices. So the sacrificial religion of the Aryas could not easily be made to spread among the non Aryan inhabitants of the land. In addition to this the common human tendency of these non Aryans in favour of a personally responsive deity must have to a noticeable extent told against the fatal completion of the sacerdotal process of ceremonial fossilisation in religion.

This sort of exclusiveness in religion is nothing very strange or very peculiar in the history of human civilization. Those of you that know anything about the religion of the Jews may remember that, till a very late period in the history of Judaism, it was an exclusive religion. It was a religion to adopt which the Jews alone were, by birth, entitled, but the Gentiles were not. Later on, however, the Jews also began to take in converts to their religion. They did not, how-from life much of the unwholesome bitterness of feeling generally arising from differences in religious creed and opinion. This is a point in relation to Hinduism which can indeed be very fully demonstrated to be true.

Here, I may, in passing, point out that even so early as the time of Vasishtha and Visvamitra the sympathetic and expansive tendencies of liberalism seem to have struggled to come up in the sphere of religion in India. Visvamitra was a liberal seer, even as Vasishtha was a conservative sage, who wanted the Vedic religion to be confined solely to the Aryas. That Visvamitra desired even this religion to be made universal, seems to be borne out by the well known story of Trisanku. Whether you approve of this view regarding our ancient Aryan liberalism in religion or not, this much is clear, that in later times the sacrificial religion had in spite of its having been more or less expanded and allowed to spread, largely to disappear, partly on account of its own over luxurious and redundant growth, and partly on account of its notable unsuitability to satisfy the earnest cravings in the heart of man after a real, hearty and living religion. And when it thus naturally faded away, we find that three deities known to the Vedas came to hold a prominent position in the popular religion of the Hindu — Rudra, Vishnu and Brahma.

With this natural decadence of the overburdened Vedic ritualism and its many and multiform sacrifices, we observe two religious forces making themselves more and more markedly effective and acting in consonance with each other in the evolution of further religious progress. The germs of philosophic speculation found in the Vedas grew rapidly and culminated in the production of our justly famous Upanishads and the popular force in favour of the personal deity also asserted itself as against the weakened sacerdotalism of decadent Vedic ritualism. It is in fact as the result of the operation of these two forces that the idea of the Hindu trinity of gods came into existence, so as to serve well the demands of religious philosophy on the one hand, and the felt religious needs of the advancing popular mind on the other. When these gods of the trinity came to hold a prominent position in Hindu religion, even then the old spirit of the religion of the Vedas, that among the gods there is none higher and none lower, that each god as he is worshipped may well be looked upon as supreme—that spirit of henotheism as Max Müller called it—persisted among the thoughtful people and with its persistence it was impossible for them to declare that any one was higher or lower among these three gods. In the meanwhile philosophy had, as I have already hinted, begun to produce more notable results than in the earlier days of the religion of the Vedas. I don't mean to say that in the Vedas we do not see the real beginnings of Hindu philosophy. It would be very wrong if I said so. On the other hand, there is ample evidence to show that potent germs of early philosophic thought are found in great abundance in the Vedas—particularly in the

Rig-Veda and in the Atharvana-Veda. That these germs should have grown well and produced large and highly valuable results is very natural indeed among a people so notably prone to be speculative and religious as the Hindus have been for centuries. The Upanishads are sometimes called the Vedanta, which means literally the end of the Vedas. If it is not thus literally interpreted to mean the last portion of the Vedas, it may be made to denote the aim or purpose of the Vedas, that for the attainment of which the Vedas seem to have steadily striven. Whatever the interpretation of the word Vedanta may be, we are able to trace in the treatises going by the name of the Upanishads, the sources of the later systems of Hindu philosophy known as the Sankhya, the Yoga and the Vedanta systems. Even Buddhistic and Jaina philosophy are held by some to be traceable to them. These treatises themselves do not give any definite expression to any particular system of philosophy. They are not the work of one mind like the systems of modern philosophers, such as Kant, Hegel, Mill, or Spencer. Although not systematised as in modern philosophic works, the thoughts in them are strikingly luminous, often very piercingly and gloriously luminous. These thoughts take us to the farthest limit of all philosophy and impel us to go even beyond, and are expressed in language which is most enthralling and highly sublime. I believe my philosophic friends will support me, if I say that, after all, there is much deadening influence in system making. As soon as we put together our philosophic thoughts into a system, there is a natural tendency for that system to lose spontaneity and originality and to become lifeless and hidebound. They lose their power to expand, and the germs of originality in them become crushed under the great pressure of the mechanical forces of systematisation. Luckily, therefore, for us the authors of the Upanishads were not like modern philosophers: they did not endeavour to build up systems. They must have felt that their function as teachers was simply to give free expression to what they from time to time saw like seers. They left system making to their later and weaker followers. That is why we have had in this country a profuse growth of pure and highly aspiring philosophy out of our Upanishads—of philosophy which has flourished in various forms and under various names, and has been systematised in various ways by various scholars and sages and saints.

Among the systems of philosophy that arose out of the luminous thoughts of the Upanishads, the very first was in all probability the Sankhya system of Kapila, which is considered by Brahminical tradition also to be one of the oldest systems of orthodox Hindu philosophy. Then came the Yoga system, and later on still, by combining, as I believe, the Sankhya and the Yoga together, came the Pedanta system. And when these systematised philosophies began to flourish, they too had of course their part to play in shaping the growth of religion and in modifying the general conception of God among the people. I told you that, in response to the inevitable cravings of the human heart, the sacrificial religion of the Vedas had to be set aside in favour of a religion wherein there was a God who was a real support to the worshipper, a God with whom the worshipper could take refuge, and from whom the worshipper could obtain love and help in times of trial and hardship. I also said that, among the Vedic gods, three came to occupy prominently the personal position which the human heart required that its gods should occupy and these are Brahma, Vishnu and Siva. In the early days of the origin of this Hindu Trinity, the old henotheistic idea was evidently operating powerfully enough to prevent any such differentiation in rank among these gods, as later controversy brought into existence in later times so as to embitter the religious feelings of the Hindus very much. Such a differentiation in rank between Vishnu and Siva, for instance, we don't see much of, even about the time when our famous poet Kalidasa flourished. In dealing with these three gods, Kalidasa looks upon them as though they were very nearly equal, and shows no kind of partiality to any one deity at the expense of another, although there is very good reason to believe that he was himself a worshipper of Siva. When he happens to offer his prayers to Siva, he offers them as to the Supreme Deity, and when again he has to offer prayers to Vishnu, he offers them similarly as if to the Supreme Deity and the language of philosophic description and praise he applies to Vishnu in one place is almost identical with the language of adoration he applies to Siva in another place. And he honours Brahma almost equally with these two gods. But how long is it possible for this religion of the equal Trinity to go on unchanged? How can you have three gods, and consider each of them to be Supreme? It is inevitable for a question like this to arise after the mind begins to philosophise a little. If you do not philosophise—the god whom you for the time being consider to be supreme—your heart naturally goes forth in adoration to that god, and in his worship, you forget everything else. But if you philosophise, you are led to become more and more circumspect. In such circumspection there is both safety and danger: and philosophical circumspection made the later attitude of India one of inquisitive doubt regarding this equal position of the Trimurtis. What I have called philosophical circumspection made it in fact necessary that the assumed position of equality among the gods of the Hindu Trinity must be accounted for in some reasonable manner. Thus there was naturally an apportionment of functions to these gods, and all the three gods making up the Trimurtis were held to be different and partial manifestations of the one great God of advancing Hindu philosophy. Thus Brahma became the creator, and Vishnu the sustainer, and Siva the destroyer.

Why is that one of these gods came to be looked upon as creator, another as sustainer, and the third as destroyer? We have to note here firstly the effect of the germinal force underlying the ancient conception of these gods. The word Brahman is often used to denote the Vedic prayer that is offered to Vedic deities. Such Vedic prayer has been personified as a deity, and declared to be powerful enough even to create. This conception of Brahman in the Veda resembles in many respects the Greek idea of the Logos. The relation between language and the meaning underlying language has played a great part in the development of Hindu philosophic thought, particularly in the matter of explaining the relation between the visible universe and the invisible reality that is behind it. Often enough we find Indian philosophers saying that the visible universe is something like the audible world of language, and that the invisible foundation of the universe is like the power of meaning possessed by language—the power of meaning which we cannot perceive with any of the senses. The relation between the word and its meaning has indeed been long held by our thinkers to be representative of the relation between the phenomenal universe and the reality which is behind it, forming its enduring basis and everlasting support. That is indeed one of the noticeable ways in which we find higher Indian thought growing, developing and expanding. Moreover, in Vedic literature, in the Upanishads in particular, we have it stated that the Creator willed, and thereby created the world. If you will, how do you give expression to your will? You do so either by means of the language you speak, or by means of the deed you do. Hence the language, which gives expression to the will of the speaker, may well become identified with the will itself. And when the creating will is seen to be really responsible for the creation of the universe, we may very well maintain that it is the word, which gives expression to the will, that is responsible for such creation. Hence the expression वदुः स्यात् being representative of the will of the Creator, naturally came to be recognised as the immediate cause of the production of creation. If we understand that the idea underlying Brahman is distinctly that of the 'word', and if we also bear in mind the relation between the word and its meaning, as well as the relation between the will and the word which gives expression to it, we may very easily realise how natural it is for the idea of creation to become associated with the Vedic Brahman. Thus arose Brahma the creator in the Trinity, and philosophy also differentiated and assigned to him the function of creation.

Now how about Siva? He is, as you have been informed, the Vedic god Rudra and as such the god of fire—Agni. This Agni as Rudra is declared in Vedic literature to have a santta tanuh and also a ghoratanuh—a form which is lovely and peaceful and a form which is terrific and fierce. In the fierce form which he has, we have to look upon him as a destroyer, and a destroying god becomes naturally the punisher of faithlessness and evil doing. Such a god can be considered neither strange nor unwanted among the essential elements of a complete religion. In this universe of ours, we may see the processes of creation, sustentation and destruction always going on side by side. We surely cannot think of the world as being at any time free from decay, if we could do that, the world would certainly cease to be what it is. I don't know if there is any poet who can command a sufficiently strong and clear imagination to portray the condition of the world as altogether unassociated with destruction and dissolution. If destruction disappear from the midst of the world, there would be no room in it at all for renovation. And will not most young men protest against such a situation? The stage of the world would then be quite fully occupied by very superfluous veterans, and when the world's stage becomes so overburdened with exhausted veterans, the young men can surely have no scope there for life and for growth. Naturally the condition of the world would then be very different—so different indeed as to be quite incapable of being consistently conceived. Destruction is thus an essential element in the universe as we know it. Whether it is possible to have a universe without destruction and decay therein, is a question which we need not at present discuss, for we know only one universe, and there can be no good at all in troubling ourselves about the possibility or otherwise of another way of organising another universe. Let us take into consideration the one only universe which we know—that, wherein we have to live from day to day, even as we have to die when the hour for it comes and this universe is characterised by decay and destruction. Destruction is as essential a part therein as importance of this function of Brahma in the universe cannot at all be gained, but his function is not designed to make him a suitable object of either religious fear or religious love. In the manner in which the fierce Rudra became quite appropriately the destroying god and an object of religious fear to his worshippers, Vishnu became equally appropriately the protecting god and an object of religious love to his worshippers. Siva, as the austere god of fear and unrelenting rigour could easily become Mahadeva or the 'great god' among the people. But Vishnu alone could be always Santalara, full of peace and benignity, so as to love his worshippers and be really loved by them in return.

In this way the functions of the three gods of the Hindu Trinity became distributed among them. At any rate I can offer no better explanation of why Brahma became the creator, Rudra the destroyer, and Vishnu the protector. Old Vedic tradition and comparatively later philosophic thought thus gave rise to the religion of the Trimurtis. This religion was, however, from the very beginning lacking in the element of finality even for the time being, as its three gods were looked upon as mere functional aspects of the one only God of the universe, the God of all gods. It is the tendency of the aspiration of religion to look up always, and to endeavour to rise to higher and higher levels of worship and realisation. Therefore, after conceiving the one only God of the universe, in whom there has to be the natural and final synthesis of all the other gods, the heart of the worshipper cannot be at ease, if he is ever called upon to worship any being who is in any manner less than the sublime and almighty fulness of his one only God, the God of all gods Siva and Vishnu, who had already become popular gods, rose under this impulse to represent the one only God of true philosophy, inasmuch as popular imagination and its predilections and prejudices would not very naturally be in favour of the adoption of an entirely new deity to represent this one only God of philosophy. Indeed Saivism and Vaishnavism appear in this light in the Mahabharata, although we cannot fail to notice therein a very marked tendency in favour of looking upon Vishnu as the one only God of true philosophy. It is true that our great poet Kalidasa was not a narrowly sectarian bigot in his worship of Siva as the Supreme God, but we cannot therefore say that he was unaware of Vaishnavism as an independent religion in which Vishnu happened to be the Supreme God. By the time the gradual growth of the Mahabharata came to its end, Saivism and Vaishnavism had already assumed their distinctive shapes and had come to be accepted among the people as different forms of one and the same religion derived from the same scriptural and philosophic sources.

In the meanwhile, that is, in the interval between the grand climacteric of Upamshadic thought and the culmination of the age-long growth of the Mahabharata, a new force of great significance came into existence in the religious and social atmosphere of Indian civilization, and that is none other than the momentous force of Buddhism. Buddhism was really a revolt against the overdone sacerdotalism of the Vedic sacrificial religion of the Brahmins. Probably it was also a revolt against the aristocratic isolation of the Brahminical priests and their monopoly to serve as the clergy, that is, as authorised teachers of religion and philosophy. When a revolt against any established order of institutions is started, it is found, in the history of all countries and civilizations, that the revolt as revolt invariably goes too far. Indeed the process is comparable to the oscillation of the pendulum in this respect: men first go to one extreme in one direction, and then they go to the other extreme in the opposite direction. Since Buddhism operated as a revolt against the excesses of Brahminical sacerdotalism and clerical monopoly, Gautama the Buddha tried to establish beyond doubt that he was as much entitled to be a teacher of religion as any Brahmin born, and taught that the mechanical religion of over formal ceremonialism and life-taking sacrifices does nothing more than merely cause unjustifiable injury to innocent animal life. He felt sincerely that such a religion cannot purify a man's life, cannot satisfy the deep spiritual longings of his heart, and cannot make his life's burden of sorrows and sufferings lighter or his hope of final freedom and salvation surer and more cheerful. In accordance with the tendency of the age, the Buddhistic revolt itself had to be based upon and guided by philosophic speculation, and the philosophy on which it was accordingly based is now recognized by most scholars.

to have been derived from the luminous and inspiring thoughts contained in the Upanishads, and probably also from some of the later systems of philosophy built up with their aid. We have both Sankhya and Yoga elements in Buddhistic philosophy, and also a large number of ideas and doctrines directly traceable to the Upanishads. The most notable feature in Buddhistic philosophy is that it does not cause men to trouble themselves about the question of the final philosophic reality. It does not ask—"Is there a God, and if there is, what is His relation to the universe?" This aspect of philosophy, Buddhism purposely ignored. It started with the proposition that life in this world is ever full of sorrow and pain and misery, and that to get out of such a life of grief and pain and misery once for all, so as to go back to it no more, has to be the chief purpose of life—its very summum bonum.

How is this purpose to be accomplished? The problem is one of practical ethics, and its solution was found out to be in the annihilation of trishna—of the thirsting after the pleasing objects of the senses and the agreeable delights of life. It is this trishna or thirsting after the pleasing things of life which is declared to be really responsible for the bondage of life—I won't say, for the bondage of the soul, because the question of the soul appears to have been left undecided in Buddhism. If we get rid of this trishna, we get rid of bondage, and then we become free. And what becomes of us when we so become free? We attain nirvana as the Buddhists say. But Buddhis-tic nirvana is not in all respects the same as the Hindu salvation of moksha. On the attainment of nirvana, man's continuously recurring mundane life of pain, sorrow and misery—of birth, growth and decay and death—is declared to disappear altogether. What there will be after all this misery disappears, Buddha does not want people to enquire into and examine. His ideal lay altogether in practical ethical life. "Look to the ethical life, don't waste your time in vain metaphysical wranglings regarding the nature of the Brahman or the destiny of the soul"—he is known to have declared more than once. Whether the soul is real, whether it is something separate and apart from or the same as God, he did not care to consider. These discussions are, after all, such as cannot lead to anything like really final and irrefutable conclusions. Indeed we cannot satisfactorily solve these metaphysical problems and give to their solutions the character of finality. Philosophy would cease to be philosophy if there were to be real finality about all its conclusions; and Buddha obviously thought that this absence of finality made metaphysical discussions useless for the practical guidance of life. There may or may not be a Brahman, and this Brahman may or may not be related to the universe. We may or may not have a soul that remains and endures even after the attainment of nirvana. These problems were to him practically insignificant. His concern evidently was to free human life from the net of over-wrought metaphysics as much as from the redundant overgrowth of ritualism, and to make it practically pure, blissful and serene. Such is a brief statement of the more important aims of Buddhism. You may see here how, in his revolt, Buddha went to the other extreme. It is true he has not denied God. He has not denied the soul either. But he has distinctly told all those that seek guidance from him that there is no good in trying to solve problems about God and the soul, and that ceremonial worship and sacrifice as elements of religion and aids to conduct are very much worse than meaningless mockery.

That is how Buddha's work came to figure in the field of Indian religion, and he naturally interfered with the even progress of old Hindu thought. He had therefore to be met. After Buddha, his followers laboured with exemplary zeal to make his religion spread. Although they took much sincere and earnest trouble, their work, like that of all propagandistic workers, made them indulge rather freely in that kind of low activity, in which their chief aim turned out to be not so much to spread the good teachings of Buddha in regard to the necessity of making human life here on earth pure unselfish, holy and helpful, as to see that other religions were subjected to harsh criticism and were made to lose their influence in the world. They, therefore, freely found fault with the ancient Vedic religion of the Hindus. Some of the old criticisms of the Buddhists are even now repeated by other modern critics of Hindu religion and Hindu scriptures. The attempt to meet these criticisms in earnest gave rise to a religious revival among the Hindus. In the case of this revival of Hinduism also, the process was indeed like the oscillation of the pendulum. When Buddhism went to one extreme, the Brahminical revival went to the other. When Hinduism started afresh to assert itself against Buddhistic opposition, it was the Mīmāṃsaka who at first came forward to vindicate the Hindu religion. He relied upon and worked for establishing the infallible authority of the Vedas. According to him the Vedas are self-produced and eternal, they are not the result of any inspired vision of any seer, they are not even revelation which is limited to time, but they are eternal and self-existent, they have always been and will ever be. With the aid of such an eternal, self-existent and infallible Veda, it was his aim not so much to establish any form of theistic ethics and rational religious worship, as to resuscitate the nearly dead ritualism of the old Vedic religion with its many and multifarious sacrifices. That was the position which the Mīmāṃsaka held. It was on this ground that he took his stand against the Buddhist. But we know that such a position, resting solely upon the eternality and infallible authority of the Vedas, cannot be made to tell effectively against the purely ethical practical position taken up by the great humanitarian teacher Buddha. When the argument of the Mīmāṃsaka against his Buddhistic critics could not thus have the desired effect in rehabilitating Hinduism, then there arose the necessity of meeting philosophy by philosophy and ethics by ethics. This could be done quite easily, because the human heart cannot go on for ever in pleased satisfaction with a religion that does not take God into consideration, and does not take the soul and its final destiny into consideration. The religion that entirely relies upon a more or less empirically determined discipline of ethical conduct in life, must be, from the very nature of the case, an unsatisfying religion. My learned and esteemed friend in the chair will, I am sure, corroborate me when I give expression to the view that the true foundation of all enduring ethics has to be found in metaphysics. That ethics which is not founded upon metaphysics is certain to be shaky ethics. That is what I understand all true philosophy to teach. That is also what the human heart evidently feels from its very bottom. It is all very well to say that our lives must be pure, and unselfish and single. But why should they be so? We are all prone to know the better and do the worse. As St Paul has put it, there is a double nature in every one of us. There is a certain something in us which always prompts us to do that which is right and good, and there is also a certain something else in us which prompts us to do what is not right and good. Between these two prompting forces in the heart of man—there is a struggle going on incessantly. If, in the course of this constant struggle, the force prompting us to do the right is not supported strongly by religion and by philosophy, then naturally the force which prompts us to do the wrong will overpower us and make our lives altogether faulty and unworthy.

Even with the aid of the support derived from the helping hand of philosophy and religion, do not, so many of us give way before the force which always tempts us to do evil? Therefore this purely ethical, and agnostic and empirical religion could not satisfy all the religious cravings of the human heart. It could not uphold religion and morality so sufficiently or so completely rationally as to make them stand on their own legs and enable us to declare with the unfailing authority of reality that the life of righteousness is alone for ever and ever the proper life for man.

Accordingly, it became necessary that the religion which strove from a theistic standpoint to counteract the agnostic influence of Buddhism, should address itself to the work of making the authoritative commandment and justification of morality and unselfishness more satisfactory than Buddhism could ever prove them to be. The work of the Mīmāṃsakas in establishing the divine authority of the Vedas and their everlasting character could not, as we have seen, give rise to this result. And so something else had to be done to bring about such a result, and thereby establish the high value and worthiness of Hindu scriptures and Hindu tradition in vindicating morality and in satisfying all the high spiritual requirements of religion. This work had necessarily to be done; and it was taken up by Sankaracharya in right earnest. That such was the need of the hour had been made out by the famous Gaudapadacharya even before the time of Sankara. Indeed Gaudapada had already succeeded in formulating a scheme of thought whereby the humanitarian ethics of Buddhism might very well be evolved out of the Upanishadic metaphysics of Hinduism. Many of us are not conscious of the manner in which we are hour after hour moulded by our environments; and often enough we feel that we are absolutely free agents in all that we think and do. But if we carefully examine the processes of history with a view to find out why it is that in one and the same country the leading men of one age think in one manner, while those of another age think in a different manner, we are sure to find out that there are natural forces which tend to produce such variations in thought and aim. It is in consequence of these forces that they think and act as they do in history. If we bear this well in mind, we may quite easily discern how very unconsciously Gandapada and Sankara must have adopted the line of reasoning they did, for the purpose of over-coming the unwholesome sceptic effects of the agnosticism of the Buddhists. One of the chief ends to be gained in this conflict was the establishment of the authority of the Vedas, which meant the same thing as the establishment of the authoritativeness of the old long cherished religious thoughts and traditions of the country. Another such object was to derive that same purity and sinlessness and selflessness of life, as was advocated by Buddha, from the teachings of our old Vedic and Vedantic religion. These are indeed among the practical historical results of the philosophical doctrines taught by Sankaracharya.

moted in a notable manner the forward progress of Hinduism along the lines of a highly improved ethical universalism. His object was evidently to win back those pious and earnest and thoughtful people, who had strayed away from the old fold of Hindu religious tradition and Hindu philosophic thought. Consequently Sankaracharya's religion had to be based on the philosophical foundation of the higher pantheistic monism; and it thus became pre-eminently the religion of jnanin. His teaching is, as you know, that the Supreme Brahman is identical with the soul, and that everything in the phenomenal universe is an illusory manifestation of that Brahman who is in fact the one only reality. Such being the position of Sankaracharya, he had naturally to propound highly metaphysical problems and theories, and had to prove that the soul is in fact a part of this one great reality in the universe, and that becoming absorbed into it in the end is indeed the great salvation of moksha. When that aim of becoming absorbed into Brahman is accomplished, souls get out of the bondage of samsara at once and as a matter of course, and in this state of moksha, every soul comes to its own enjoyment of unlimited light and eternal bliss and peace. It is not difficult to make out how these teachings of his tend to give a firmer and more rational metaphysical foundation even for Buddhistic ethics. In this we have the greatest historical achievement to be placed to the credit of Sankaracharya. He saw, and made others also see distinctly, that the moral fruits of pure Buddhistic life to help him and render protection unto him whenever he got into difficulties—a God at whose feet he might throw himself unreservedly so that He in His divine wisdom might do with him whatever He chose. The sense of man's dependence upon God, his instinct of love to God, and his felt need for an always unfailing divine support could not be easily satisfied by the sublimely impersonal God of Sankara's pantheistic monism. What wonder, if soon afterwards there arose among the people the desire to see where else they could obtain their religious satisfaction? The old religion of the Hindus was distinctly marked by the supreme dominance of a loving and saving divine personality in it. Even before Buddhism there was, as it appears, the religion of the Hindu Trinity. And after Buddhism lost its great influence in India, the popular position of Vedantic Hinduism became very highly improved. This religion had by that time been proved to be in no way inferior to Buddhism or any other religion, in the matter of establishing the obligatoriness of pure ethical conduct as based on sinlessness and selflessness in life. And yet the need was felt for a personal God, and for a more emotional and less intellectual religion than that of Sankara. This more emotional and less intellectual religion had in fact been known well to the people of India before. Such a religion is clearly traceable in the pages of the Mahabharata and in the Puranas. And after Buddhism and Sankaracharya, this old emotional religion was felt to be more and more wanted. Accordingly religions religious teachers in India as in every other part of the world. But they have differed as to the question of how this sinless life is to be realised in practice. Is it to be made dependent upon spiritual and philosophical realisation, or is it to be made dependent upon the culture of the tender and benevolent emotions, has in fact been the practical problem at issue. There can be no doubt that both the processes are capable of yielding the fine fruit of pure and noble conduct. However to most men and women the culture of the emotions happens to be easier than the achievement of spiritual and philosophic realisation.

Ramanujacharya accordingly declared bhakti to be the most suitable means to achieve purity, sinlessness, and selflessness in life, and hence this same bhakti was according to him the truest and the most unfailing means for the attainment of the salvation of mōsha. The emotion of bhakti is said to be a feeling akin to love, it is indeed deep devotion and love. Even in our common daily life we may very well realize what a potent factor love is in encouraging morality and in establishing purity and selflessness and sinlessness in life. Imagine a young man who is entirely absorbed in himself who does not care to think of anybody or anything other than himself—imagine further that, either as in India or in the fashion of Europeans he marries a beautiful and worthy damsel and becomes day after day more and more attached to her in love. Suppose this young man of the above description goes to the Bangalore fruit market and sees rows of fine ness, every temptation that tends to make our lives unrighteous and faulty disappears at once. In this way love may be made not to be a very potent factor in giving rise to purity and unselfishness in life. If this feeling of love is steadily and carefully cultivated in the human heart, if it is made to find its object not merely in the wife and the children, but in that great Being, who is the very life and foundation of the universe, and from whom comes all that is good and true and beautiful in the universe, if that Being is made the object of our love, then there will arise, as they put it in Sanskrit, anugadiviragah—that is, through intense attachment to that divine Being, there will arise in us absolute non attachment to ourselves.

This idea is sometimes illustrated in Hindu literature by taking the example of an uncontrollable illegitimate attachment which a man may have to a mistress, although he is morally bound to bestow on his own wedded wife all his love and attachment. As his illegitimate love grows in intensity, that is, as the object of his illegitimate love becomes more and more dear to him, his lawfully wedded wife may be seen to be discarded by him more and more. Thus his viraga or want of attachment to the wedded wife bears an inverse ratio to his anuraga or loving attachment to the illegitimate mistress. This example is not a very happy one morally nevertheless as an illustration it is very telling. And what I want you to understand from it is, that, if we make God the object of all our attach-to wear ourselves away cheerfully in serving those whom we love. Our love of God—when it is indeed real and hearty—is fully capable of turning us into earnest and sincere servants of all His creatures. In fact it is in serving His creatures that our love of God finds its satisfaction and makes itself alive and visible. And it is actually maintained in the Sri Vaishnavism of Ramanuja that to love and honour and serve the Bhagavatas is even more meritorious than to worship the Bhagavat. Loving devotion to God has been and is undoubtedly a great moral force in human history.

Thus with the aid of bhakti we may annihilate selfishness and thereby realise moksha. The obligatoriness of bhakti is, therefore an unfailing authority in favour of pure ethical conduct and high nobility of purpose. It is indeed an unfailing means to help us always to attain real success in living the righteous life. Moreover it is easier for us to command bhakti than to obtain that transcendental spiritual wisdom and the realisation of the unity of reality which Sankaracharya's philosophy demands of all its followers. The tendency to love is altogether natural and is implanted in the heart of all persons. There is in fact no person of any kind who has not a natural aptitude to love and to be moved by love. The only point to be attended to in respect of this natural emotion of love is to make it expand so widely and so comprehensively that it may have the great God Himself and all His creatures for its object. And the tendency of love to have itself lavished upon the beloved is very frequently seen to be against the Supreme Lord, the God of all gods. There is other evidence also to prove that the doctrine of bhakti is undoubtedly an ancient element in the religion of the Bhagavatas. Anyhow there can be no doubt that the all-pervading and all-enlivening Vishnu, who, as Bhagavat, is the loving bestower of all auspicious boons and blessings, and is, as Narayana, the abode of all life and the internal controller—antaryamin—of all beings, is most appropriately approached through bhakti. The most glorious delight of love is ever in experiencing the response of love to love. Therefore to a loving God, what can be more delightful than the confident and trustful love with which His devotees respond to His love? And is not Vishnu, the bestower of light and life and of all auspicious boons and blessings, a loving God? When we think of our own unworthiness to be the objects of His love, and contrast it with His infinite benevolence and the immense value of all His divine gifts, how can we conceive Him to be other than a really loving God? On the certainty of His all merciful and omnipotent love is based another doctrine of the Sri Vaishnavas, which is closely allied to the doctrine of bhakti and may even be said to be a natural development of it. I refer to the doctrine of prapatti or absolute self-surrender to God, which is also spoken of sometimes as saranagati. This doctrine of self-surrender is based mainly on the last teaching given by Sri-Krishna to Arjuna in the Bhagavadgita, and it is hence held to be as authoritative as the Gita itself. I told you a little while ago that there are some modern philosophers also who maintain that man's sense of dependence on a higher power has to be an essential element in all religion. Whether it really has to be so or not, we need not discuss now. But it is evident that the doctrine of prapatti is based on such a sense of dependence on God—a dependence which is complete and unquestioningly trustful. Ramanuja's views regarding this doctrine come out most beautifully from his Saranagatigadya, which is a highly pathetic prayer in Sanscrit prose embodying his great faith in God as his sole refuge and only Saviour.

There is another point in the work of Ramanuja in connection with Vaishnavism, which is brought prominently to view by the name Sri Vaishnavism, which has been given to the religion he taught and upheld. It is sometimes called Vaishnavism of the Sri sampradaya. Ramanuja's religion has been called Sri Vaishnavism, because Sri, that is, the goddess Lakshmi, is made to have an important function to perform in it. When man, by means of his bhakti, endeavours to attain moṣha, it is found that he often feels helpless and hopelessly forlorn on account of his knowledge of his own culpable unworthiness to be blessed with the salvation of soul emancipation and God-attainment as also on account of his very natural conception of God as a just and impartial apportioner of the fruits of karma to all His creatures. When we deal with a great question of religion and morality like the fitness of God's creatures to be saved and lifted out of the thralldom of samsara, and base its solution on our metaphysical conceptions of God and of the will of God, we cannot help thinking of Him as a hard taskmaster, who is systematically bent upon seeing that all His commandments are duly obeyed by all His creatures, and that His will is always honoured by them as law. With such an absolutely just God, who is very rightly and very naturally apt to become deeply disappointed with us whenever we violate His commandments, our chances of attaining salvation are indeed infinitely small. When we calmly measure our own capacity to conduct our lives in complete consonance with the will of God, the result is certain to fill us all with great despondency. Since the moral law is based upon the will of God, we are all bound to live our lives in accordance with the moral law. But when the weakness that is in us unnerves us and we become a prey to temptations, how can we then manage to live the life that is morally faultless? And if we break down under the heavy pressure of trying temptations, are we thereafter to have no hope of any kind regarding the attainment of the bliss of soul salvation? In this manner we are led to face the old problem of how the mercy of the loving God may be reconciled with the strict impartiality of the absolutely just God. It is in a situation like this that we naturally feel the need for the kindly interposition of a suitable intermediary between us and our great God,—an intermediary, who on the one hand is willing and able to excuse our faults and can on the other hand effectively approach our almighty God with the petition for mercy in behalf of His weak and erring creatures. It is not here in India alone that the help of such an intermediary has been sought by pious and God-fearing people. Other religions also than this Sri-Vaishnavism seek and postulate an interceder between God and man, between the ever-just and almighty God and the weak and erring human being, so that this weak and erring being may be made to have the full benefit of divine mercy. Some make their religious Guru such an interceder; others, like the Christians, make a divine incarnation serve as such an interceder; and Sri-Vaishnavism looks upon Lakshmi, the divine Mother of the Universe, as such an interceder. To bear well and without harm the burden of moral and religious responsibility belonging to weak and erring mankind, some such interceder between the judging God and the human beings to be judged is very rightly recognised to be necessary by more than one well-known religion. Now in the religion taught by Ramanujacharyn, this interceder is, as you have been already told, the goddess Lakshmi. The conception of Lakshmi as the divine consort of Vishnu is also an old one in Hindu religion. It is known to later Vedic literature, and has a philosophical meaning underlying it—this meaning being nothing other than the true representation of the relation between prakṛiti and Parama-puruṣa. Prakṛiti is conceived to be the wife of God, who is the Supreme Being. According to what is called by some Pauranika Sāṅkhya—which is the same as the Sāṅkhya of Kapila, with the exception that, in the Pauranika Sāṅkhya, a Supreme Soul is postulated and made to have the same relation to the universe as a whole as the various individual souls have to their respective embodiments—according, to this Pauranika Sankhya, it is maintained that prakriti, which is in fact the source of the created universe, is obedient to the will of the Supreme Soul and gives birth to the universe in consequence of His close association with it. Hence prakriti is looked upon as the wife of God and the Mother of the Universe. Both Vaishnavism and Saivism have recognised the appropriateness of this conception of the relation between God and Nature, and in Saivism we have prakriti and Parama purusha even blended together in conception of the Ardhanarisvara—the God who is represented as half man and half woman. If we understand that Lakshmi represents in Vaishnavism the power of prakriti, we may easily make out the meaning and fitness of the function assigned to Her in Sri Vaishnavism. Even according to the Sankhya of Kapila, prakriti is conceived to undergo all her modifications with a view to liberate all bound souls from their imprisonment in matter, and is for this reason compared to a kind and loving mother. In Pauranika Sankhya, Mother Nature happens thus to be the obedient and loving consort of Father God. Please note here that the feminine gender of the word prakriti in Sanskrit has not been without its influence in making Nature the kindly Mother of All, even as God is the great Father of All. Looked at in this light, what does the propitiation of Lakshmi really signify? It place not unoften by the infusion of new ideas into old institutions. A great Arabic scholar writing about the religion of the Semites pointed out some years ago, with many examples, the tendency that there is in human societies to conceive their divinities almost unconsciously in the light of their own social organizations. If we have a community of people whose society is matriarchal in organisation, and among whom the mother is, therefore, the most prominent person in the family, their most natural conception of the deity happens to be as a goddess. They look upon the high supernatural being or beings at whose hands they seek sympathy and support as a mother. In other communities wherein the social organisation is patriarchal, where the father is the most authoritative figure in the family, the divine being is looked upon as a father. This state of affairs in human civilisation is indeed very well known to students of anthropology. And we are able to make out with various kinds of evidence that the Dravidian people of South India possessed in the early days a matriarchal organisation of society, that among them the mother was accordingly the most important figure in the family, and that consequently the worship of the village goddess as amman—that is, as mother—came to be very prevalent among them. If we have a people among whom goddess worship is prevalent, and if we want to introduce in their midst a newer and a higher religion, it turns out to be necessary to find a real place for a great goddess in that newer and higher religion. This was probably one of the reasons which led to the enthronement of Lakshmi in the religion of Ramanujacharya as the world's Merciful Mother, who is the ever-loving and ever successful mediatrix between Her Lord God and the individual souls seeking the salvation of a perfected re-union with Him. Ramannja's predecessors in the line of Sri-Vaishnava teachers had already given a prominent place to Lakshmi in their religion, probably because it happens to be a characteristic feature of Sri-Vaishnavism that it arose in the Tamil land and obtained its fresh nourishment largely from the inspired thoughts and sentiments of certain well known Tamil poets and saints. The thought influences proceeding from the poets and saints were taken up by Brahminical teachers, and were woven into the philosophy of Vaishnava Vedanta in a very remarkable manner. Such a mutual interweaving of pious poetry and sublime philosophy is probably not seen in the literature of any other religion. The Sri Vaishnavas often speak of their sacred literature as Ubhaya Vedanta, that is, as a double Vedanta consisting of the Sanskrit philosophic Vedanta and the Tamil poetic Vedanta. And the association of Lakshmi or Sri with Vishnu as the intermediary between weak man and almighty God must also have been postulated in this manner in response to popular needs and influences, and it led to various consequences. Thus it is in all probability that Vaishnavism became here a religion in which Mother Lakshmi has to intercede for mercy between God and His children. And who are His children? All mankind—nay, all living beings.

If all mankind happen to be His children, and if Mother Lakshmi intercedes between weak and suffering mankind on the one hand and almighty God on the other, we can easily understand now in this religion none can be kept out of the Holy of Holies and none can be looked upon as unworthy to receive the grace of God. If out of a family of a number of children, a mother keeps away any one child from sharing the kindly and merciful favour of the father, she certainly deserves to be characterised as an unnatural mother. Therefore in this religion there is an all-comprehensive divine graciousness which knows no exclusion. The reciprocity and the universality of divine and human love, as known to this religion, has in no small measure been the result of the Mother of All being made in it to intercede between God and all His children so as to temper His serene justice with tender mercy.

I have thus tried to indicate to you in a very brief outline the position occupied by Ramanujacharya in the development of Sri-Vaishnavism in our country. Vaishnavism, when adopted by Ramanuja, had already become Sri-Vaishnavism. In it the old Bhagavata doctrine of salvation through bhakti had been reasserted and developed beyond into the doctrine of prapatti. The decision to utilize the Ubhaya Vedanta to Sanskrit philosophy and Tamil Vaishnava poetry as the basis of Sri-Vaishnavism had also been arrived at and practically carried out to a large extent by the predecessors of Ramanuja. Accordingly he was in no sense the pioneer of the popular religious movement out of which Sri-Vaishnavism arose in South India. He may be said to have come on the crest of the wave of this movement; and it received its final seal of authority and rational sanction at his hands. That he secured for it the full support of the Sanskrit Vedanta, and proved it to be a worthy means for the exaltation of the social virtues and the uplifting of the masses, is abundantly demonstrated by the events that filled his long life of courageous conviction and enduring sincerity and comprehensive humanity. Let me refer in illustration of this to the single instance of his having admitted the paraiyas—the holeyas as you call them here—as worshippers, into the famous Vishnu temple at Melkote, which is, as you all know, situated within the Mysore State. The humanity and the courage involved in this noble act are both highly remarkable, and worthy of the enfranchising religious movement which attained its consummation through his work. After him others carried the stream of Vaishnava thought in various ways into various parts of this holy land of ours; and new forms of Vaishnava faith came into existence under new conditions. But these are matters which cannot be included within the scope of the present lecture. The popularisation of the ideas of the Fatherhood of God, the Motherhood of Lakshmi, and the Brotherhood of Man in India is indeed in a notable degree due to Ramanuja and his work in life; and it is now a fact of history that to him may be traced more or less largely the beneficent religious influences that have proceeded from Ramananda, Kabir and Nanak. So far, Ramanuja's work in connection with the immortal and ever progressive religious life of India has shown itself to be like the work of the great sower who sows good seeds in good soil: and we may therefore feel well assured that, under the quickening stimulation of the heavenly light of God-love, the harvest of the love of man to man as man will in due time be quite abundant and full of further hope and further promise in this our ancient and historic country, wherein he lived so well and laboured so truly.

APPENDIX

THE ALLEGED PERSECUTION OF THE JAINS BY VISHNAVARDHANA AND PAMANUJA

BY

MR S KRISHNASWAMI AYYANGAR, M A

That it is impossible that either Vishnavardhana or his successors could have sanctioned any such thing, is borne out by a number of incidents in their history. It was from the royal residence at Melkote that Vishnavardhana makes a grant to the Saiva temple, at Chamundi Hill. He does receive the 'holy food' presented by the Jains after the consecration of the Jinalaya at Halebid and directs the God being named Vajaya Parsvanatha in honour of his victory. He honours Sripala Trividya Deva (the Jain controversialist) and even appoints him tutor to his children. It was about this time that the Vira Saiva (the so-called Lingayat) sect comes into prominence, so that in the course of the century Jainism was subjected to the simultaneous attacks of the Vaishnavas from the South and the Virasivas from the North. The manner in which the Hoyasals—rulers and ministers alike—dealt with these rival sects is a supreme instance of their religious policy from which more modern rulers might learn lessons of wisdom. The minister of Vira Narasimha, by name Polalva Dandadhisa, founded the temple of Harihara, the image in which has the form combined of both Siva and Vishnu, thereby to indicate that there is actually no difference between the two. This achievement of a Vaishnava minister in reconciling the two opposing sects is a unique instance of a breadth of view in religion, which is hard to be found elsewhere at the time

This was the feat of one of a class of persons, rulers and ministers, who had been devoted Vaishnavas. Vishnuvardhana after his conversion, perhaps through the course of his career, built temples dedicated to Narayana—at any rate endowed them richly,—such as Vira Narayana at Talakad, Vijaya Narayana at Belur, Kirti Narayana at Bannur, &c. In his progress through his dominions he had taken pains to enquire into the condition of these and other foundations, and saw that they were restored to their former position of eminence as places of worship. He did not in this show any partiality to one sect or the other. His general Gangaraja and his Jain wife Santala Devi, endowed Jain temples equally with his sanction as the several donations to Jain temples by this general and other Jain devotees would show. This example was followed by his successors, whether they were Vaishnava or Saiva, for some of them were of the latter persuasion also.

Thus then it is clear that in the matter of religion this Vaishnava Constantine Vishnuvardhana, as the disciples of Ramanuja took delight in calling him, was far from being a sectarian. No attempt was made at any uniformity of religious belief and the policy of the rulers was the most liberal that could be imagined.

SELECT OPINIONS ON "THE INDIAN REVIEW"

Rev. J. T. Sunderland, Toronto, Canada.—"I read your 'Review' with great interest and profit. I wish the 'Indian Review' could be placed in many public libraries in Canada, the United States and England. It would do a silent but telling work."

The Late Mr. William Digby, C. I. E. "..... In its way—an admirable way—I think the 'Review,' which emanates from Madras, is an exceptionally interesting monthly publication, and I congratulate Madras not only on leading the way with a monthly 'Review,' but on the excellence of its lead."

Mr. J. Herbert Roberts, M. P.—"Let me congratulate you on the admirable editorials of this interesting monthly. I appreciate highly your many services to the cause of progress in India."

The Tribune—A storehouse of pleasant and instructive reading.

The Educational Review.—There is no periodical in India which approaches it for the money. It caters for all readers, and should prove a welcome addition to the reading tables of first-grade colleges.

Sir William Wedderburn.—"An excellent Madras Magazine."

The annual subscription to the Indian Review is Rs. 5 (Five) only per annum including postage. Subscription can commence from any month. If you have not already seen the Review send postage stamps for Rs. Two for a free specimen copy to G. A. Natesan & Co., Madras.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sunkurama Chetty Street, Madras.

KING GEORGE'S SPEECHES IN INDIA

- A COMPLETE COLLECTION OF ALL THE SPEECHES
DELIVERED IN INDIA DURING HIS TOUR
AS PRINCE OF WALES AND IN CONNECTION WITH THE RECENT CORONATION DURBAR

This is a complete and up to-date collection of all the speeches delivered by His Majesty the King Emperor during his first tour in India as Prince of Wales and his second tour in connection with the Coronation Durbar. No speech of any importance relating to India has been omitted, and to make this handy collection of His Majesty's Indian Speeches doubly valuable a useful Appendix has been added, containing among others the text of the announcement relating to the Coronation Durbar Boons, the Proclamations of H. M. King George, Queen Victoria and King Edward the Seventh on their accession to the throne and the messages of Queen Victoria and King Edward to the Durbars of 1877 and of 1903. The book contains a fine portrait of Their Majesties as Iron's piece and seven other illustrations. We hope that this handy volume will be welcomed by the millions of His Majesty's subjects not only in India but all over the Empire.

With eight Illustrations.

Re. One To Subscribers of the "Indian Review,"
As 12.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sualnrama Chetty Street, Madras

Central Hindu College Magazine These energetic publishers have thus added one more to the list of books that every household should possess. Many people will be glad to read His Majesty's own words.

The Purjatee The speeches are valuable as they contain many expressions of appreciation of India, its people and their loyalty. It is also valuable as they contain many encouraging hopes and words of sympathy expressed by the Royal mouth.

The Rast Gofar The publication would be welcomed throughout India, and should come handy to publicists and journalists especially.

Morley's Indian Speeches

An Enlarged and up to-date Collection

CONTENTS.—Indian Budget Speech for 1906 Indian Budget Speech for 1907. Speech at Arbroath The Partition of Bengal Indian Excise Administration. British Indians in the Transvaal The Need for Reform. The Condition of India. Speech at the Civil Service Dinner The Reform Proposals. Second Reading of Indian Councils Bill The Creation of Provincial Executive Councils Third Reading of the Indian Councils Bill The Hindu Mahomedan Problem The Forward Policy. Back to Lord Lawrence The War on the Frontier. The Government of India. Also the Full Text of his Despatch on the Indian Reform Proposals. An appreciation of Lord Morley, and a good portrait.

Select Notices

"Opportune Publication * * * Ought to prove an invaluable book in the book shelf of every Indian Politician and Journalist"—The Indian World

'Should command a wide and ready sale'—The Empire

Double Crown 8vo 300 Pages.

Re I To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," As. 12.

G A Natesan & Co., Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras.

Dr. [Rash Behari Ghose's] Speeches.

An Exhaustive and Comprehensive Collection Includes all his utterances in the Viceregal Council, his protest against the retrograde policy of Lord Curzon's Indian administration, and the splendid Address of Welcome which he delivered as Chairman of the Reception Committee of the Indian National Congress at Calcutta, also the full text of the undelivered presidential Address to the Surat Congress (With a portrait.)

Price As. 12. To Subscribers of the "Review As." 8.

DADABHAI NAOROJI'S SPEECHES AND WRITINGS

This is the first attempt to bring under one cover an exhaustive and comprehensive collection of the speeches and writings of the venerable Indian patriot, Dadabhai Naoroji. The first part is a collection of his speeches and includes the addresses that he delivered before the Indian National Congress on the three occasions that he presided over that assembly all the speeches that he delivered in the House of Commons and a selection of the speeches that he delivered from time to time in England and India. The second part includes all his statements to the Welby Commission, a number of papers relating to the admission of Indians to the Services and many other vital questions of Indian administration. The appendix contains among others the full text of his evidence before the Welby Commission his statement to the Indian Currency Committee of 1898 his replies to the questions put to him by the Public Service Committee on East Indian Finance. Dadabhai has been in the active service of his motherland for over sixty years and during this long period he has been steadily and strenuously working for the good of his countrymen. It is hoped that his writings and speeches which are now presented in a handy volume will be welcomed by thousands of his admiring countrymen.

860 pages, Crown Octavo

Rs 2 To Subscribers of the Indian Review Rs 1 8

G. A. Natesan & Co. Sankurama Chetty Street Madras.

"Sir William Wedderburn. The volume on Mr Dadabhai Naoroji is also an armoury of facts and figures

The Morning Post—A very handy and well printed record of the Parsi Parliamentarian's career. The book will doubtless have a big sale, for it deals with and chronicles official opinion on some of the most important political problems of to-day. An excellent portrait of Mr Dadabhai Naoroji forms the frontispiece to the volume.

For India's Uplift,

A COLLECTION OF

SPEECHES AND WRITINGS ON INDIAN QUESTIONS

BY MRS. ANNIE BESANT.

NOTE.—This is the first attempt to publish in one volume a comprehensive and exhaustive collection of Mrs. Besant's speeches and writings on Indian Questions. The subjects dealt with cover a wide field. The education of Indian boys and girls, especially of the depressed classes, the question of moral and religious instruction, the industrial development of India, the Indian Uprose and the true relation that should exist between England and India—all these problems are treated by Mrs. Besant with her well known lucidity and eloquence. The publishers venture to think that a perusal of this book will make Indians realise what great, good and lasting services Mrs. Besant has rendered for India's uplift.

CONTENTS.—The Ancient Ideal of Duty, Education as a National Duty, The Necessity for Religious Education, The Education of Hindu Youth, The Education of Indian Girls, Education of the Depressed Classes, The Protection of Animals, The Protection of Children, India's Awakening, The Indian Nation, The Aryan Type, England and India, Uprose in India, The Value of Theosophy in the Raising of India, The Work of the Theosophical Society in India, The Means of India's Regeneration.

PRICE AS. TWELVE

To subscribers of the I R As 8

G. A. Natesan & Co., 38 Sunkurama Chetty Street, Madras

Swami Vivekananda

AN EXHAUSTIVE AND COMPREHENSIVE COLLECTION OF HIS SPEECHES AND WRITINGS

THIRD EDITION

This publication is the first of its kind. It is the most exhaustive and comprehensive collection of the work of Swami Vivekananda hitherto published. It contains among others his eloquent character sketch of 'My Master' his celebrated lecture at the great Parliament of Religions at Chicago all the important and valuable speeches delivered in England America and India on Quana Yoga Bhakti Yoga Karma Yoga Vedanta and Hinduism sections from the inspiring speeches he gave in reply to addresses of welcome that were presented to him at different towns and cities in India, during his historic journey from Colombo to Adyar on his return from America.

Detailed contents—My Master Hinduism as a Religion Reply to the Addresses of Congratulations from Madras and Calcutta The Ideal of Universal Religion God in Everything Immortality Is the Soul Immortal The Freedom of the Soul Maya and Illusion Maya and the Conception of God Maya and Freedom The Real and the Apparent Man The Absolute and Manifestation Unity in Diversity The Cosmos The Macrocosm Realization Karma Yoga, Metaphysics in India Reincarnation Bhakti or Devotion Vedanta The Vedanta in Indian Life The Message of the Vedantic The Sage's India Christ The Messenger The Relation of Buddhism to Hinduism The True Method of Social Reform The Reform of Caste Education on National Lines The Conquest of the World by Indian Thought Poems etc. Contains also, Four Portraits Price Rs 2 To Subscribers of The Indian Review Rs 1 8

G. A. Natesan & Co. Sooramas Chetty Street Madras

SWAMI VIVEKANANDA This is a lengthy and interesting sketch of the life and teachings of this eminent Indian saint, with copious extracts from his speeches and writings. With a portrait As 4

 The annual subscription to the Indian Review is Rs 5 (Five) only including postage. Subscription can commence from any month. If you have not already seen the Review send postage stamps for As Four for a free specimen copy to G. A. Natesan & Co., Madras. Current issues are not given as specimen copies.

Speeches by Eminent Indians

Dadabhai Naoroji's Speeches—An up-to-date exhaustive and comprehensive collection. With a portrait
Rs 2 To Subscribers of the 'Indian Review,' Rs 1-8

Gokhale's Speeches—An exhaustive and comprehensive collection of his speeches with a biographical sketch and a portrait Over 1 000 pages Crown 8vo Rs 3
To Subscribers of the 'Indian Review' Rs 2-8

Dr Rash Behari Ghose's Speeches—An Exhaustive and Comprehensive Collection (With a portrait) Price
As 12 To Subscribers of the "Indian Review" As 8

Swami Vivekananda—An exhaustive and comprehensive collection of his speeches and writings With Portraits. Cloth Bound Third Edition Rs 2 To subscribers of the "Indian Review" Rs 1-8

The Indian National Congress—An account of its origin and growth Full text of all the Presidential Addresses Reprint of all the Congress Resolutions Extracts from all the Welcome Addresses. Notable Utterances on the Movement Portraits of all the Congress Presidents Cloth Bound Over 1 000 pages Crown 8vo Rs 3 To Subscribers of the "Review" Rs 2-8

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sunkurama Chetty Street, Madras,

*THE MOST ENTERPRISING OF PUBLISHERS

The Indian Nation—Cultured, energetic and enterprising publishers of Madras

The Provincial Times—Messrs G. A. Natesan Publishers Esplanade Madras have issued a series of books not alone of interest to a general reader, but of value as references and historical records

The Empire—That ferociously enterprising firm of publishers

THE DEPRESSED CLASSES

AN ENquiry INTO THEIR CONDITION
AND SUGGESTIONS FOR THEIR UPLIFT

The publishers venture to hope that the publication of the volume will stimulate further interest in the problem of the elevation of the Depressed Classes and that men of all castes and creeds will co-operate together for devising means and measures for the mental, moral, social and material advancement of fifty millions of our countrymen who at present are unfortunately sunk in ignorance and poverty.

Contents.—His Highness the Gaekwar of Baroda Mr Ambika Charan Murumdar; Mr B. D. I. C. S., Mrs Annie Besant; Lala Lajpat Rai, The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, The Hon'ble Mr. T. V. Seshagiri Aiyar, Mr. Saint Nihal Singh; Mr. Valentine Chirol, Rev C. F. Andrews, B. A., Bahu Sarada Charan Mitra, Pandit Sitannath Tatvabhusan, Mr P. R. Sundara Aiyar B. A., B. L., Rt. Rev The Lord Bishop of Madras; Rao Bahadur V. M. Mahajan M. A., Hon. Mr. Justice N. G. Chandavarkar The Hon. Mr V. Krishnaaswami Aiyar, The Anagarika Dharmapala The Hon. Mr. Balakrishna Sahay, Mr. A. Vasudeva Pai, Babu Govind Dass, Mr. N. Ranginatham, B. A., Mr G. A. Natesan, B. A.

PRICE RE. ONE

To Subscribers of the "Indian Review" As. 12½

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras.

The Indian Social Reformer.—A number of papers by several distinguished men on the position of the Depressed Classes.

United India. Messrs Natesan & Co., have done a real service to these poor but deserving people by the issue of this valuable little publication which ought to go a long way in rousing the national conscience to a perception of the serious disabilities these poor persons are labouring under. The book ought to be in the hands alike of educated Indians and Europeans interested in the upliftment of the depressed classes.

LIFT-IRRIGATION

BY ALFRED CHATTERTON,

Professor of Engineering, on Special Duty, Madras.

CONTENTS Introduction, Water Lifts, Underground Water Supply, Well Irrigation with Oil Engines, Irrigation from Artesian Wells, The Value of Wind Mill in India, Experiments with Wind Mills, Wind Mills Irrigation in America, The Cost of Power, Cost of Lifting Water, Flow of Water in Sand, Well Boring, Steam Pumps in the Kistna Delta, Development of Lift Irrigation, Lift Irrigation, Irrigation by Pumping, Progress in Irrigation by Pumping in Madras, Irrigation by Pumping in the United States

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION

Some years ago, Messrs G. A. Natesan & Co. reprinted a number of papers and articles which I had written at various times on the improvement of the methods of lifting water for irrigation. The little volume apparently served a useful purpose as it met with a ready sale and has been out of print for some time. The demand for information, as to the methods to be pursued and as to the results which have been achieved, still continues and in the absence of any formal treatise on the subject, a fresh compilation of papers has been made which it is hoped will to some extent supply what is needed.

Price Rs Two

To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," Re. 1 8.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras.

Capital Contains in lucid and succinct form account of all the various methods for raising water for irrigation purposes now used in India and in the United States. There are millions of bullocks employed every day in India in lifting water. But it has been proved beyond doubt that the cost of pumping even on a small scale with oil engines is less than one-half that of the bullock power, and on a larger scale the cost is not even one-tenth. Water lifting by windmills is also fully described and the results of the various experiments described.

ALL ABOUT DELHI

AN EXHAUSTIVE HAND BOOK

Compiled from Authentic Sources
With 36 illustrations

[COMPILED FROM VARIOUS AUTHENTIC SOURCES]

Contents—The Hindu Kings, Early Muhammadan Kings, The Moghul Emperors, Modern Delhi, Some Delhi Sights, Monuments at Delhi, The Storming of Delhi, The City Gazetteer, Lord Lytton's Darbar, Lord Curzon's Durbar, The King's Durbar of 1911

In the preparation of this book free use has been made of Mr Fanshawe's Delhi Past and Present, more especially in the compilation of its last Chapter, of Dr. Fergusson's Eastern and Indian Architecture in the description of its great architectural glories, of the revised Imperial Gazetteer for the latest statistics relating to the city, of Captain Trotter's Nicholson for a description of the storming of Delhi, and of Mr Reynold Ball's Tourist's India for a succinct account of its far famed Mithay Sites. Besides the standard writers on Indian History and the accounts of European and other travellers to India during the Moghul period, much interesting information has been gleaned from Mr Abbott's Through India with the Prince, Mr Percival London's Under the Sun, Mr G. W. Steevens' In India, Genl Gough's Old Memories, and Mr Kerr's From Charing Cross to Delhi.

With thirty six Illustrations

Price Re 1 8

To Subscribers of "The Indian Review" Re 1 4.

G. A. Natesan & Co, Sundarima Chetty Street, Madras.

The Indian Mirror The book gives brief accounts of the Hindu, Pathan, and Moghul sovereigns who reigned over old and New Delhi, and full particulars of the various sights which visitors are expected to "do". For the modest sum of a rupee and a half the reader has at his disposal reproductions of the graphic accounts of these sights from the coarser productions of Fergusson and Fanshawe, and the "Imperial Gazetteer of India". A large number of illustrations intersperse the volume.

Sankarā's Select Works

Sanskrit Text and English Translation

By MA. S. VENKĀTARAMANAN, B. A.

Contents — Hymn to Hari; The Ten-Versed Hymn; Hymn to Dakṣinamurti; Direct Realisation; The Century of Verses; Knowledge of Self; Commentary on the Text; Definition of one's own Self.

Preface — The main object of this publication is to present, in simple English, some of the works of Śrī Saṅkarācārya in which he tried to expound, in a popular style, the philosophy of the non-dualistic Vedānta of which he was the well known founder. With this view the present translation has been rendered free of technical words and phrases. It is hoped that the juxtaposition of the Sanskrit text and the English translation will serve the double object of enabling the student of Sanskrit to understand the text better and to correct, by a reference to the text, any defect of expression in the translation as an inevitable result of the attempt to garb it in a popular style. To those that have had no training in metaphysics or dialectics and have neither the leisure nor the capacity to read the original standard works of Saṅkara, a publication of this kind should be specially helpful for a proper understanding of the broad outline of Saṅkara's philosophy of non-dualism.

Bound in Cloth & Price Rs. 1.8

To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," Re One

G. A. Natesan & Co., Schoolmans Chetty Street, Madras.

Weekly Chronicle.—Every one interested in the history of religious reform and the evolution of religious thought in India should know something about this great teacher of the South.

 The annual subscription to the Indian Review is Rs. 5 (Five) only including postage. Subscription can commence from any month. If you have not already seen the Review, send postage stamps for Rs. Four for a free specimen copy to G. A. Natesan & Co., Madras. Current issues are not given as specimen copies.

THE
VAISHNAVITE REFORMERS OF INDIA CRITICAL SKETCHES OF THEIR LIVES AND WRITINGS

BY

T. RAJAGOPALA CHARIAR, M.A., B.L.

CONTENTS.—Nathamuni, Pundarikaksha; Yamunacharya, Sri Ramanujacharya, Sri Vedanta Desika; Manavala Maha Muni, and Chaitanya.

These are a Series of Seven Essays on the Lives and Writings of the principal religious reformers of the Vaishnavite or Visishtadwaita School of India. The treatment is critical and historical, but special prominence has also been given to the literary side of this School's activity. A clear account of the growth of Vaishnavism is intended to be conveyed by these Lives of Eminent Reformers, and reference has throughout been made to the development of doctrines. A special chapter is devoted to the exposition of the Visishtadwaita philosophy according to Ramanuja. The growth of Vaishnavism in Northern India is briefly dealt with in the last Essay, that on Sri Chaitanya, wherein that great Saint's career is also fully described.

Re 1¹ To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," As 12

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras.

Bombay Guardian. This little book can be recommended to all persons who care about the subject, for its interesting biographical notes, its abundance of Hindu lore, and its perfect lucidity.

The Rangoon Spectator. The above work by Mr. T. Rajagopala Chariar, M.A., B.L., outlines in seven Essays of exceptional ability, the development and influence of a great school of Indian philosophy.

Aspects of the Vedanta.

CONTENTS.

- The Vedanta—Some Reasons for Study.
The Late Mr. N. Vythinatha Aiyar, M. A.
- Veda and the Vedanta.
The Late Prof. Max Müller
- Vedanta Toward All Religions
Swami Abhedananda.
- The Vedanta in Outline.
Pandit Nilanath Tattvalbhusan.
- The Vedanta Religion.
Professor M. Rangachariar, M. A.
- The Ethics of the Vedanta.
The Late Mr. N. Vythinatha Aiyar, M. A.
Rao Bahadur Vasudeva J. Kartikar.
- The Philosophy of the Vedanta.
Dr. Paul Deussen.
- The Vedanta Philosophy.
Swami Vivekananda
- The Vedantic Doctrine of the Future Life.
Pandit Nilanath Tattvalbhusan.
- The Vedanta: Its Theory and Practice,
Swami Satyananda.
- The Vedanta for the World.
Swami Vivekananda.
- Price Rs. 12 To Subscribers of the "Review," Rs. 8.*
-
- G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankararaja Chetty Street, Madras.

International Journal of Ethics Valuable little book . . . The whole book is worthy of careful study by everyone interested in theology or philosophy.

The Theosophical Review. This useful little volume.

The Prabuddha Bharata. A worthy compilation ..

.... It will repay perusal.

The Englishman. Will interest readers who make a study of Oriental thought. There are six essays and they are all appreciative and meant to stimulate one to believe in the eternal principles of the Vedanta.

THE BHAGAVAD-GITA

WITH THE TEXT IN DEVANAGARI AND AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION

BY MRS ANNIE BESANT.

Note—It has long been my ambition to place within reach of the English reading public a cheap edition of the Bhagavad Gita with the text in Devanagari and an English translation of the same. Mrs Annie Besant, that warm and tried friend of India whose services to our land it were vain to count has enabled me to realize that ambition by generously granting the use of her English translation. It is devoutly hoped that this great scripture of the Hindus will find a place in thousands of homes both in India and elsewhere.—G. A. NATESAN.

Price per copy As 2 (Two)

When ordering mention the number of copies 15th Stamps will not be received

The Prabud in Bharata—In clearness of type in size and shape, the book leaves nothing to be desired. We can heartily recommend it to all who want a trustworthy pocket edition of the Gita.

The Modern Review—Mr Natesan is bidding fair to be the Indian Routledge. This finely printed edition of a well known and excellent translation has been here offered at an impossibly cheap price and it should make its way to every Indian home and heart.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankararam Chetty Street, Madras.

FOR INDIA'S UPLIFT Essays and Speeches on Indian Questions By Annie Besant As 12.

MRS. ANNIE BESANT A sketch of her Life and her Services to India With copious extracts from her speeches and writings. With a portrait, 64 pages. Price Annas Four.

NATION BUILDING A Stirring appeal to Indians Suggestions for the building of the Indian Nation. Education as the basis of National Life. National Universities for India. Price Annas Two.

THE LIFE & TEACHINGS OF BUDDHA

BY

THE ANAGARIKA DHARMAPALA

Price As. 12. To Subscribers of the "Review," As. 5

SRI SANKARACHARYA

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

BY C. N. KRISHNASWAMY AIYAR, M.A., L.T.

HIS PHILOSOPHY.

BY PANDIT SITANATH TATTVADHUSHAN.

Price As. 12. To Subscribers of the "Review," As. 5.

Sri Madhwa and Madhwaism

A HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL SKETCH.

BY C. N. KRISHNASWAMY AIYAR, M.A., L.T.

Price As. 12. To Subscribers of the "Review," As. 5.

SRI RAMANUJACHARYA

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

BY S. KRISHNASWAMI AIYANGAR, M.A.

HIS PHILOSOPHY.

BY T. RAJAGOPALACHARIAR, M.A., B.L.

Price As. 12. To Subscribers of the "Review," As. 5.

J. A. Natesan & Co., Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras.

The Indian National Congress

An Account of its Origin and its Growth
Full Text of all the Presidential Addresses
Reprint of all the Congress Resolutions
Extracts from all the Welcome Addresses
Notable Utterances on the Movement
Portraits of all the Congress Presidents

This is an exhaustive and complete Collection of all the Congress Presidential Addresses and the Resolutions passed at the sittings of all the Congresses. The book also contains extracts from the Welcome Addresses delivered at all the Congresses and several Notable Utterances on the Congress Movement by men like the late Charles Bradlaugh, Robert Knight, Sir William Hunter, Mr. Justin McCarthy, Sir Richard Garth, Lord Cromer, Sir Charles Dilke and others. An attractive feature of the book is a collection of the portraits of all the Congress Presidents Cloth Bound Over 1,100pp Crown 8vo.

Price Rs. 3. To Subscribers of the "Review," Rs. 2 5

Lord Ampthill — The book seems to me a very complete and well chosen summary and it is one which will be useful to many people besides myself for the purpose of reference

Sir Herbert Roberts, M. P. — The record of the work of the National Congress is not only of extreme interest but will be most useful in future as a source of information as to the progress of enlightened opinion in India upon many questions deeply affecting the welfare of the people

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankararam Chetty Street, Madras.

The Hindustan Review — The Indian statesman, politician, or publicist could scarcely have at this time of the year a better book on his shelf than that designated "The Indian National Congress." It is obvious that no public man or publicist's book-shelf of works of reference can be complete without a copy of Mr. Natesan's excellent compilation of the Congress literature. Considering its bulk and matter, it is cheaply priced at Rs. 3.

Glimpses of the Orient To-Day

BY SAINT Nihal Singh.

Preface.—The following pages are the record of a recent ramble through Asia, the author having personally visited all the lands about which he writes, with one or two exceptions.

It is a collection of impressions formed as the writer slowly journeyed from one land to another, living amongst the people, as one of them.

The book falling into the hands of the Indian youth—for whom it is especially designed—will be the means of inspiring him to work for the uplift of his land.

Contents:—Asia's Spell Broken; How Disillusionment Came; Asia a Menace to the West; Japan's Imperial Dream; Oriental Trade Supremacy; Autocracy to Limited Monarchy; The Modern Oriental Woman in the Making; Where Woman Has The Upper Hand, The Modernization of Japan; Flaws in Japanese Modernization; Education in Japan; Japan's Material Prosperity; Japan: China's Giddy; The Celestial Student Abroad; Exit the Old, Enter the New in China, Revolution, Not Revolution in India; The Spirit of Mayas Leaving Hindustan; To Day in Afghanistan; Persia Evolving Cosmos Out of Chaos, Rural Life in Iran; Egypt's Agitation for Autonomy, Egypt's Preparation for Self Government.

First Edition. Price: Re One

To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," As 12.

G. A. Natesan & Co, Sankaranna Chetty Street, Madras.

The Gujarati.—Mr. Saint Nihal Singh tells us how the impact of the West upon the East has shaken the Oriental out of his metaphysical musings and taught him to think of the world of to-day, how the new awakening is to be traced in all Eastern countries. He is an optimist and in favour of an all-aided progress. The spirit that runs through the whole book is commendable and deserves to be imbibed by the Indian youths for whom the book is intended.

My Indian Reminiscences

By Dr Paul Deussen

EXTRACT FROM THE INTRODUCTION

In recording my impressions of my trip to India in the winter of 1892-93 and thus presenting them to the public I have yielded to the wishes of my friends, partly because, notwithstanding the shortness of my stay in India, I was enabled—being favoured by circumstances, to get a deeper insight into the life of the natives than a European usually gets.

My knowledge of Sanscrit, the study of it had been to speak, my daily bread for the twenty years previous to my trip, was of immense service.

What was to be of still greater use to me in India than the knowledge of the ancient and sacred language of the land, was the fact that I had happened to have spent the best energies of a number of years in entering into the spirit of the Upanishads and the Vedānta based upon them.

CONTENTS

Introductory, From Marseilles to Bombay Bombay
From Bombay to Peshawar From Peshawar to Calcutta, Calcutta and the Himalayas From Calcutta to Bombay via Allahabad, From Bombay to Madras and Ceylon, Homeward Bound APPENDIX—Philosophy of the Vā
dānta Farewell to India A POEM

Crown 8vo 270 pages, with a frontispiece

Price Re. 14 To Subscribers, Re 1

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras.

The Merit of the Book—Dr Deussen's account of his tour throughout India, his description of his principal cities, its shrines, pilgrimages and its many holy spots, its leading men of various communities and classes afford much interesting reading. The language in which he describes the customs, ceremonies, manners, traits and traditions of the Indian people notwithstanding the shortness of his stay in India show his profound admiration and love for the land which, to use his own words, "had for years become a kind of spiritual mother-country" to him.

POPULAR EDITION

Essays in National Idealism

BY ANANDA K. COOMARASWAMY

Contents—The Deeper Meaning of the Struggle; Indian Nationality; Mata Bharata; The Arts and Methods of Indian Arts; Art and Yoga in India; The Influence of Modern Europe on Indian Art; Art of the East and of the West; The Influence of Greek on Indian Art; Education in India; Memory in Education; Christian Missions in India; Swatishi; Indian Music; Music and Education in India; Geography—and why not?

Select Opinions

"The Indian National Movement appears to us to have entered a new phase, and the publication of the present volume from Dr. Coomaraswamy's pen marks a definite step in the progress of that movement.....It is clear that a very important step has been taken to promote the cause of Indian Nationalism along Indian as distinguished from Western lines by the publication of the work "Our Mapasana."

"One could hardly be prepared for the vigour of thought and masculine energy of English, by which they are marked.....Their author is a logical and uncompromising reactionary.....Yet we cannot deny the beauty and truths of the pure Ideal as he so nobly and persistently holds it up before us.....We think the book he has written to be of surpassing value."—Modern Review.

Re: 1 To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," As 12.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras.

THE INDIAN NATIONAL LIBRARY SERIES.

—Every one of the volumes, big and small, Messrs. Natesan have of recent years published contains views of India and Indian current history and forms most reliable references of the great social and mental movements now pulsating throughout India. We would suggest that all their publications of the sort of the four volumes now before us be classed as The Indian National Library Series, for beyond question their publication is forming a library of national literature for India—Moulmein Advertiser.

'Essentials of Hinduism

A SYMPOSIUM BY

Sir Gura Dass Banerjee Kt, The Hon Mr Justice
T Sadasiva Aiyer, Mr Satyendranath Tagore ICS
Mr P T Srinivasa Iyengar B.A., F.R.S. Dewan
Bahadur R Ragoonath Rao, C.S.I. Mr P Narayana
Iyer, B.A., B.L., Rai Bahadur Lala Bagnath, Dr Sir
S Subramania Aiyar, KCIE LL.D., Rao Bahadur
V K Ramanujachari, Babu Bhagavan Das, The Hon
Mr V Krishnaswami Iyer C.S.I., The Hon Mr
Gokuldas K Parekh Rao Bahadur C V Vaidya, Pandit Durga Datta Joshi Babu Govinda Das, The Hon Mr Justice P R Sundra Aiyar, Dewan Bahadur
K Krishnaswami Rao, C.I.E. Rao Bahadur K Ramanujachari, Rao Bahadur V M Mahajan Rao Bahadur
Waman Madhav Kolhatkar The Hon Dewan Bahadur
M Adinarayana Iyah Rao Bahadur Deorao Vinayak
The Hon Mr N Subbarau Pantu'u Babu Sarada
Charan Mitra Sir Pratul Chandra Chatterji Kt, C.I.E., LL.D.

• PRICE ANNAS EIGHT

To Subscribers of the INDIAN REVIEW Annas, Six

(1) A Natesan & Co Sankurama Chettu St., Madras

THE LIFE AND TEACHINGS OF BUDDHA

BY THE VAGARINA DHARMAPALA

This is a clear and concise account of the Life and Teachings of Lord Buddha written by a well known Buddhist authority and in a style specially intended for non Buddhists the book is bound to be widely circulated and appreciated With an appendix and illustrations
Price As 12, To subscribers of the 'Indian Review' As 8

KASINATH TRIMBAK TELANG

- THE MAN AND HIS TIMES

BY MR. VASANT H. NAIK M. A.

PREFACE

The years between the seventies and nineties of the last century, however tame they may appear to us now have a deeper significance for us as being the epoch of pioneer work. These were the years when the foundation was laid of many an activity, the ripening of which is yet to come. In all these activities Telang played a very conspicuous part. The knowledge of his life, his ideals, his methods of work and his aspirations will not come amiss, nay is bound to be immeasurably useful to so age when passion is apt to run riot and "enthusiasm is made to do duty for reasoned scrutiny."

The sketch can lay no pretent on to the name of a biography. It is but an humble essai on the part of the writer to understand the man and his times and to draw for himself a picture of the man as accurate and faithful as possible from the very scanty materials at his disposal.

FOOLSCAP 8 VO 158 PAGES .

PRICE RE ONE

To subscribers of the Review Rs 12

G. A. Natesan & Co., Swokurama Chetty Street, Madras

The Mail — The late Mr Justice Kasinatha Trimbak Telang, who died in the very prime of his life, was a profound Sanskrit scholar, a great linguist, an ardent but cautious social reformer, an eminent educationist and above all, a true patriot. The life of this notable Indian must be an inspiring example to all his countrymen, and Messrs G. A. Natesan and Co., have done well in publishing the sketch.

Indian Political Literature

Essays in National Idealism—By Dr Ananda K. Coomaraswami with illustrations Rs One To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," As 12

Morley's Indian Speeches—With an Appreciation of Lord Morley, and A Portrait Crown 8vo 240 Pages, Rs One To Subscribers of the Indian Review, As 12

Gokhale's Speeches—With a biographical sketch and a portrait Over 1000 pages, Crown 8vo Rs 3 To Subscribers of the "Indian Review" Rs 2-8.

The Indians of South Africa—By H B L. Polak. Rs One To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," As 12.

Dadabhai Naoroji's Speeches and Writings—With a portrait Rs Two To Subscribers of the "Indian Review" Rs 18

Glimpses of the Orient to-day—By Saint Nihal Singh Price Rs 1 To Subscribers of the "Indian Review" As 12

The Indian National Congress—An account of its origin and growth. Full text of all the Presidential Addresses Reprint of all the Congress Resolutions Extracts from all the Welcome Addresses Portraits of the Congress Presidents Over 1200 pages Crown 8vo Rs 3 To Subscribers of "The Indian Review," Rs 28

Indian Military Expenditure—By Mr Dinshaw Edulji Wacha As 4

Recent Indian Finance—By Mr Dinsha Edulji Wacha Price As 4.

Indian Railway Finance—By Mr D E Wacha As 4.

G A Natesan & Co , Sunkurama Chetty Street, Madras.

The Indian People—By collecting the speeches and writings of Dr Rash Behari Ghose, Swami Vivekananda, the Honorable Mr Gopal Krishna Gokhale, Lord Morley, he has done a distinct service to both the younger and elder generation of Indians for these are books which the younger people like to have constantly by their side to study and the elders to refer to occasionally

INDUSTRIAL INDIA

BY MR. GLYN BARLOW, M A

CONTENTS

1 Patriotism in Trade, 2 Co-operation 3 Industrial Exhibitions 4 The Inquiring Mind 5 Investigation, 6 Indian Art 7 Indian Stores, 8 India's Customs, 9 Turning the Corner 10. Conclusion

SECOND EDITION

Re 1. To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," As 12.

SELECT PRESS OPINIONS

"The Madras Mail"—Throughout the book there is a cheery note of optimism which ought to be encouraging to those who are exerting themselves to bring about improvements

"The Madras Times"—This little book is well written, well edited and well published, and we can safely recommend our Indian friends to read, mark and inwardly digest its contents

"The Daily Post" Bangalore—The book is an eminently readable one and if it does not prove useful that will not be due to the fault of the writer

"The Indian Spectator"—Every young man in India ought to read Mr Glyn Barlow's book.

G A Natesan & Co Sunkurama Chetty Street, Madras.

The Bombay Gazette—Overflows with good advice to industrial and trading classes, which they would do well to consider

The Indian Magazine and Review—This book contains an appeal to Indians to promote industries in their own country on principles of combination, and the practical question is discussed, how far this is possible at present, united efforts being there so little understood or attempted

The Englishman—The book should be in the hands of every public-spirited man in this country

Essays on Indian Economics

BY THE LATE MAHADEV GOVIND RANADE

CONTENTS —Indian Political Economy the Reorganisation of Real Credit in India Netherlands India and Culture System Present State of Indian Manufacture and Outlook of the same Indian Foreign Emigration, Iron Industry—Pioneer Attempts Industrial Conference, Twenty Years Review of Census Statistics Local Government in England and India Emancipation of Serfs in Russia Prussian Land Legislation and the Bengal Tenancy Bill the Law of Land Sale in British India

Rs. 2 To Subscribers of the 'Indian Review, Re 1-8

SELECT OPINIONS

India—Indispensable upon the shelves of every student of Indian Politics

The Political Science Quarterly—The author not only has a complete command of English but uncovers with great skill the mistakes made by the British in applying the maxims of English Political Economy to Indian conditions

G. A. Natesan & Co. Sankharam Chetty Street Madras

The West Coast Spectator—This is a very valuable contribution to Indian Political Economy, and should prove extremely useful just now when important questions relating to the development of our country's resources are engaging the attention of the people. The book should find a place in all libraries and may with advantage be used by all college students and others who wish to have information about the country's industrial resources.

THE SWADESHI MOVEMENT

A SYMPOSIUM BY

Representative Indians and Anglo-Indians

Contents.—Dadabhai Naoroy; H. H. The Gaekwar of Baroda; The Hon. Mr. G. K. Gokhale; The Hon. Dr. Rash Behari Ghose; The Hon. Sir Vitaldas Damodar Thackersey; The Hon. Md. Yusuf Khan Bahadur; Mrs. Annie Besant; Rajah Percy Mohun Mookerjee; Sister Nivedita, Lala Lajpat Rai, Dewan Bahadur K. Krishna-swamy Row; The Hon. Mr. Harikishen Lal; Babu Surendranath Banerjee; Rai Bahadur Lala Baij Nath; Dewan Bahadur Ragunatha Row; Romesh Chunder Dutt, c i r., i c a; Mr. A. Chaudhuri; Hon. Mr. Parekh; Mr. D. E. Wacha; Hon. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya; Mr. Aswini Kumar Datta; The Hon. Mr. Krishnaswamy Iyer; Hon. Mr. Ambica Charan Murumdar; Dewan Bahadur Ambalal S. Desai; Mr. G. S. Arundale; Sir Charles Elliot, Mr. David Gostling; Rajah Prithwipal Singh, Rai Bahadur P. Ananda Charlu, c i r; Sir E. C. Buck, k c s i; Dr. Ananda K. Coomaraswamy; Mr. Munibur Rahman; Abdul Rasul, Esq., Bar at Law, Babu Tara Prasanna Mukherjee, Dewan Bahadur Govindaraghava Iyer; Mr. Abdul Halim Ghuznavi; Rao Bahadur R. N. Mudholkar; His Honor Sir Alderbert F. White; Mr. Charles W. McEwen; Mr. Bal Gangadhar Tilak; Mr. Hemendra Prasad Ghose; Pandit Ramraj Dutt; Mr. Mushir Hosain Kidwai, Bar at Law.
The book also contains the views of H. E. Lord Minto, H. E. Sir Arthur Lawley, H. H. Sir Andrew Fraser and Lord Amthill.

Price Re. 1. To Subscribers of the "Review" As 12.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sunkurama Chetty Street, Madras.

The June Jamshad.—We consider this book worthy of special study.

Sir Roper Lethbridge, K. C. I. E.—Students of economics and of social science throughout the world owe a deep debt of gratitude to Messrs Natesan for the admirable series of little volumes containing all these valuable speeches and essays.

The Mussalman.—Calculated to amply repay perusal.

Essays on Indian Art, Industry & Education

BY E. B. HAVELL

Late Principal, Government School of Arts Calcutta.

"Author of Indian Sculpture and Painting," etc

All these Essays deal with questions which continue to possess a living interest. The superstitions which they attempt to dispel still loom largely in popular imagination, and the reforms they advocate still remain to be carried out.

Contents —The Taj and its Designers, The Revival of Indian Handicraft, Art and Education in India, Art and University Reform in India, Indian Administration and 'Swadeshi' and the Uses of Art.

SELECT OPINIONS

The Englishman, Calcutta —Mr Havell's researches and conclusions are always eminently readable. His pen moves with his mind and his mind is devoted to the restoration of Indian Art to the position it formerly occupied in the life of the people, to its reclamation from the degradation into which Western ideals falsely applied have plunged it, and to its application as an inspiring force to all Indian progress and development. It is full of expressions of high practical utility and entirely free from the jargon of the posturing art enthusiast.

The Modern Review —We may at once express our emphatic conviction that it is a remarkable book, destined to leave its impress on the current thought of India, and to guide her efforts into new channels to her glory and honour. Crown 8vo, 200 pp.

Re 1-4 To Subscribers of the "Indian Review," Re 1

G. A. Natesan & Co, Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras

The Harvest Field —Anything that will make India more beautiful appeals powerful to us.

The Essays are interesting.

The Christian Patriot —All are thoughtful and inspiring articles and stimulate the reader to think of new paths for the rising generation and avoid beaten and overcrowded tracks in which many young men are still content to walk.

THE IMPROVEMENT OF INDIAN AGRICULTURE

SOME LESSONS FROM AMERICA

By Mrs. Saint Nihal Singh

AUTHOR OF

"The House Hygienic" "My Favourite Recipes"

"How to Make Good Things to Eat"

"The Virtues of Varnish," etc.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	PAGE
PUBLISHER'S PREFACE	1
WHERE FARMING IS A PROFITABLE PASTIME ..	1
HOW THE AMERICAN GOVT HELPS THE FARMER ..	39
THE RELATION OF MANURE TO THE CROP .	65
PLANT BREEDING IN AMERICA	91
HOW THEY RAISE RICE IN AMERICA	102
WHEAT GROWING IN AMERICA	127
MAKING MONEY OUT OF MILK	147

Crown 8vo, 160 pages

Price Re 1 To Subscribers, As 12

G. A. Natesan & Co. Singapore Chatter Street Madras

The Indian Nation—Cultured energetic and enterprising publishers of Madras

The Kayastha Messenger—The worthy publishers have laid the educated classes under a deep debt of gratitude by placing before them interesting useful and cheap publications

The Moulmein Advertiser—The many valuable booklets published by Messrs Natesan & Co., on subjects of the deepest interest and value to India should fill a recognised place in the library of every student of India, past and present

SECOND EDITION

AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN INDIA

BY MR SEEDICK R SAYANI

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY

SIR VITALDHAS DAMODAR THACKERSEY

Contents — Agriculture, Rice, Wheat, Cotton, Sugar Cane, Jute, Oilseeds, Acacia, Wattle Barks, Sunn Hemp, Camphor, Lemon Grass Oil, Ramie, Rubber, Minor Products, Potatoes, Fruit Trade, Lard Industry, Tea and Coffee, Tobacco, Manure, Subsidiary Industries, Sericulture, Apiculture, Floriculture, Cattle Farming, Dairy Industry, Poultry Raising, Appendix

Sir Vitaldhas Thackersey writes —

Mr S R Sayani I think, has given valuable information regarding the present state and future possibilities of the principal cultivated crops of India

Re I To Subscribers of the "Indian Review" As 12

Mr W H SHARP, DIRECTOR OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, BOMBAY: "Agricultural Industries in India" by Seedick R Sayani, price Rs. One and published by G A Natesan & Co, Esplanade, Madras is recommended as a book suitable for the Libraries of Secondary Schools in this Presidency

H E THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY hopes that it may have a wide circulation and stimulate the introduction of the improvements which are so necessary if India is to reach its full economic development as a producing country

G A Natesan & Co, Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras

The Provincial Times Messrs G A Natesan, Publishers Esplanade Madras have issued a series of books not alone of interest to a general reader but of value as references and historical records

The Indian Witness — G A Natesan & Co Madras, are making quite a name for themselves by their varied publications

The Empire — That ferociously enterprising firm of publishers Messrs G A Natesan & Co Madras

Indian Industrial and Economic Problems.

BY V. G. KALE, M. A.

Professor, Fergusson College, Poona.

CONTENTS

Preface.—Imperialism and Imperial Federation—An Imperial Customs Union and Tariff Reform—The Present Economic Condition of India—The Problem of High Prices—Twenty-five Years' Survey of Indian Industries—The Labor Problem in India—The Break-down of Roycroft—Kwadrak and Roycroft—National Economics and India—High Prices and Currency—Fiscal Freedom and Protection for India—Indian Protectionism—Preferential Duties—India and Imperial Preference

PREFACE.

The author is a moderate though a staunch protectionist, and has taken a calm and dispassionate view of the whole question. While he condemns unmitigated free trade as an unsuitable economic policy for India, and puts in a vigorous plea for the protection of indigenous industries by the state, he is careful to point out the real scope and limitations of Indian protectionism. The status of India in the British Empire has much economic significance which has been brought out in not a few of the chapters. The author's conclusions are throughout based upon a close study of facts and figures and upon careful deliberation and no effort has been spared to procure and make use of all available information.

It is hoped that the book will assist the student of Indian Economics to the formation of a correct estimate of India's economic situation and of the various complicated questions involved therein.

PRICE RE. ONE.

To Subscribers of the Indian Review, Annas 12.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Soukurama Chetty Street, Madras.

Patric—Prof. Kale is a well known writer on Indian economics. His writings always command the respect and attention of the educated people. The book is worth a close study, for India's industrial and economical problems are complex and varied.

INDIAN TALES

AMUSING READING — Annas Four Each

New Indian Tales — Nineteen amusing and instructive tales By Mr C Hayavadana Rao Fellow of the Anthropological Institute London Price As 4

Tales of Raya and Appaji — By T M Sundaram Sixteen amusing and instructive stories The stories are characterised by a great deal of wit and humour Price As 4

Tales of Komati Wit and Wisdom — Twenty five amusing and instructive stories By C Hayavadana Rao B.A., B.L. Price As 4

Tales of Tennali Raman — The famous Court Jester of Southern India Twenty-one Amusing Stories By Pandit S M Natesan Sastri Third Edition As 4

Folklore of the Telugus — A collection of forty two highly amusing and instructive tales By G R Subramania Pantulu Price As 4

Tales of Mariada Raman Twenty-one Amusing Stories By P Ramachandra Rao Avergall Retired Statutory Civilian Second Edition Price As 4

The Son in Law Abroad and other Indian folk tales of Fun Folly Cleverness, Cunning Wit and Humour By P Ramachandra Rao B.A. B.L. Retired Statutory Civilian Second Edition As 4

Mattreyl A Tale Story in Six Chapters By Pandit Sitasath Tattabhusan Second Edition As 4

G A Natesan & Co Sankurama Chetty Street, Madras

The Valras Mail — A delightful collection of witty tales and anecdotes. The stories are quaint and clever

The Valras Standard — Popular Tales abounding in fun and humour Ought to be of great interest and amusement especially to the foreign reader and the folklorist. The book is well suited to while away agreeably enough an idle half hour during a railway journey

Punjab Educational Journal — These tales are simple but very amusing

Biographies of Eminent Indians

A Series of Uniform Booklets each with a Portrait

Foolscap 8vo Price As. Four each

The aim of this Series is to present within a short compass sketches of the lives and careers of all eminent Indians. Each Volume besides giving a succinct biographical sketch contains copious extracts from the speeches and writings of the personages described. The Series has been pronounced by the Press to be "the most welcome addition to Indian, biographical and critical literature."

Dr. Dadabhai Naoroji

Sir P. M. Mehta

Dinul & Edulji Wacha

Mahadev Govind Ranade

Sri Ramakrishna

Paramahansa

Sri Sri Vivekananda

Prof. Mr. O. K. Gokhale

Dr. Rash Behari Ghose

Lt. Col. Lalpat Rai

Ravi Varma

Toru Dutt

K. T. Telang

Surendranath Banerjee

Ramesh Chunder Dutt

Ananda Mohan Bose

W. C. Bonnerjee

Badriddin Tyabji

Sir Syed Ahmed

Lal Mohon Ghose

M. K. Gandhi

Madan Mohan Malaviya

Babu Kristo Das Pal

R. N. Mudholkar

Price As. 4 Each 1 Doz. at a time As. 3 each.

G. A. Natesan & Co., Sunkurama Chetty Street, Madras.

UNIFORM WITH THE ABOVE.

SWAMI RAM TIRATH

V. KRISHNASWAMI AIYAR, C.S.I.

DEWAN C. RANGACHARLU.

DEWAN BAHADUR RAGUNATHA RAU.

RAHIMTULLA MOHAMED SAYANI.

H. H. THE AGHA KHAN

RAJA RAM MOHAN ROY

KESHUB CHUNDER SEN

ISVARA CHANDRA VIDYASAGAR.

J. N. TATA.